Col. Angus B. Duffy made his last appearance in uniform at the 385 Madoc Royal Canadian Army Cadet

Corps Annual Inspection on Saturday. Col. Duffy was pleased to see the dress and deportment of the Madoc and area cadets and hoped some would continue in military careers.

Col. Angus B. Duffy appears in uniform for last time

The Annual Ceremonial Inspection of number 385 Madoc Royal Canadian Army Cadet Corps was a big success on Saturday, as retiring Colonel Angus B. Duffy made his final appearance in uniform in Madoc.

This year's cadet corps upheld the tradition of No. 385 Corps in Madoc of putting as many cadets on the parade square as were available and doing the best job possible. As usual, Number 363 Royal Canadian Legion Branch and the Board of Education, the sponsoring organizations, gave their full support to this annual event.

Colonel Duffy, in his remarks to the cadets, stressed the role that these cadets play in their community and hoped that the training they received would stand them in good stead throughout their lives. He was impressed with the attitude and deportment of this corps and he was honored to be asked to appear in uniform for the last time at this ceremonial inspection. He felt that, besides showing good knowledge of drill during the parade, the corps also did a commendable job of the various displays during the day.

As the parade came to a close, awards were presented to outstanding members of the corps. The Kincaid Brothers Best Cadet Award went to Lt. Elizabeth Sarrazin. CSM Donna Sarrazin received the Leadership award presented by the Madoc Legion, Number 363, while the Best NCO award was won jointly by WO Douglas Johnson and WO Donna Blair. Best Female Cadet in the ranks went to WO Susan Sarrazin while Cpl. Charles Flint won the Best Male Cadet in the ranks award. Best Rifle Shot was again shared jointly by Cpl. Joan Billings and Sgt. Ron Sargent. Tina Baker won the Most Improved Cadet Award and a special presentation was made to Capt. Roy Matcheck.

There's going to be a Fun Fair at the Madoc Township Public School on June 19, between 6 p.m. and 10 p.m. and everyone is invited. Admission price is only 25 cents and that gives you a chance to win the door prize too.

The Fun Fair is going to include just about everything you can think of including a magic show, skill games, plant, book and bake sale, clowns, refreshments, a surprise table and free babysitting. There is going to be something for young and old alike.

Watch for some of the students from the school selling tickets on the raffie as they are trying to get some advance sales. Proceeds for the Fun Fair will be going towards gymnasium, music and library equipment at the school.

Marmora, Tweed and Madoc schools participate in spelling bee

The Fourth Annual Madoc Centennial Spelling Bee was held in the Madoc Public School last Wednesday night with local contestants doing very well. Students participated from Tweed, Marmora and Madoc.

In the primary division, Jason Bailey of Madoc Public School edged Tracey Kraine of S.H. Coñnor School in Tweed for first place with Leanne Empey of Madoc Public School placing third.

Lorraine Brinson won the junior division for Tweed-Hungerford Senior School while Lianne McKeown of Earl Prentice School in Marmora was second and Ivan Herrington of Madoc Public School was third.

Madoc Public School did well in the senior division also as Siobhan Harrop placed first, Tammy Teetstra of Marmora Senior School placed second and Jill Wiggins of Madoc Public School, ranked third.

In the adult category, Grace McKeown of Springbrook took first place over Ann Rowe of Tweed while Elaine Warren of Millbridge ranked third.

The students surprised most people in that they were able to spell some very difficult words and the contestants were well matched, which meant that each contest took some time to decide. As one principal put it when he introduced his contestants, "These children are winners in their own schools, so they can't do any worse than that."

Jason Bailey and Tracey Kraine have just received their trophies for placing first and second respectively in the primary division of the spelling bee on Wednesday night.

Special Olympics get under way this Friday and Saturday in Belleville

This Friday and Saturday, athletes from the Centre Hastings Retraining Centre travel to Belleville to compete in the Special Olympics being held at William R. Kirk School, and the athletes invite the people of the Madoc, Marmora and Tweed districts to join them in Belleville.

Registration for the event begins at 10:30 a.m. on Friday with the opening ceremonies scheduled to begin at 12:30 p.m. The athletes are in for a special treat during the opening ceremonies as Bobby Hull is the special guest. Also, a sports announcer from CJBQ Radio will be announcing the events during the day. At 1 p.m. the athletes will begin the swimming competitions at Sir James Whitney School while the track and field events will begin at Centennial Secondary School.

On Saturday, events begin at 9 a.m. with lunch for the athletes scheduled for 1 p.m. at the Dick Ellis Arena. Closing ceremonies begin at 2 p.m. at the Dick Ellis Arena.

The athletes from the Centre Hastings Retraining Centre will be leaving Madoc at 10 a.m. and will arrive back in Madoc between 6 and 7 p.m. on Saturday night.

Sharleen French advises us that you can reach the Olympic site by entering Belleville via Highway 62 and North Front Street, turning right at College Street, proceeding to Sidney Street, turn left before turning right at the Coca Cola plant. When you arrive at the Quinte Drive-in, William R. Kirk School and the games site are to your left.

Miss French advises The Review that the athletes are very excited about this opportunity to represent their areas and merchants within those communities. Each athlete will wear a shirt with the name of the Retraining Centre on the front and their sponsoring business or organization on the back. The Madoc Review would like to join with the rest of Madoc in wishing these athletes success at the meet and, above all, we hope they enjoy the competition.

The new Madoc Township radio alerting system.

Township Fire Department grows to point of joining Mutual Aid

Members of the Madoc Township Fire Department pose with the tanker and the new pumper and the Scott airpump that is now part of their inventory. The department is based in the township buildings and regular practices are held every Tuesday night.

The Madoc Township Volunteer Fire Department has spent the last year in upgrading their equipment, manpower and facilities to the point where they are about to enter Mutual Aid.

The department's list of accomplishments over that time period are impressive. Manpower has been raised from five to sixteen men, the 1,500-gallon tanker truck has been augmented with the 1963 GMC pumper that was purchased in November, a radio alerting system has been installed, breathing equipment for rescue in burning buildings (a Scott Air Pack) has been purchased, new coats, hats and boots have been purchased for 21 men and the department can now communicate between trucks with the new radios.

With all of this having been accomplished in the past year, the department is still not content to rest on its laurels. They are now working on a location code system that will help the firefighters locate a fire that much quicker during an emergency. The map and the system have been worked out by several different members of the department and their wives with a great many man hours having already been used to perfect the system. The department hopes to initiate the new system in the near future and letters including the location number of each resident will soon be circulated. This location number will also be put to use in conjunction with the police and the ambulance. The new method of reporting a fire would be to dial "0", ask for Zenith 66660 and state the name of the person and the location code for that person or the phone where you are making the call. That will get the fire department to your location and you can then direct them to the fire.

Fire Chief Jerry Morrison is justifiably proud of his department. "Our call for volunteers brought excellent response from the community, and we now have 16 men with another two to be added in the near future. The new beeper system we have is one of the most modern of its kind and it will ensure that our volunteers are alerted of a fire in our township within thirty seconds; no matter where they are in the township or surrounding area."

The Madoc Township Volunteer Fire Department holds regular Tuesday night practices, and while all of the volunteers are from the township, Chief Morrison advises us that this does not necessarily have to be the case. Volunteers are welcomed from anywhere.

CHSS athletes qualify for OFSAA

Ted Bergeron and Tracey Deline were the only two Centurion athletes to qualify for the All-Ontario meet in Thunder Bay this week out of eight who attended although that's not a bad showing because the competition was very tough.

Bergeron placed first in the Eastern Region Qualifying meet held in Kingston last Friday in the discus throw. Ted had trouble getting his throws in the sector to qualify and, on this third throw, he just planted his feet and threw from the waist up. In his first throw of the top eight qualifiers, he threw his best ever competitive throw a distance of 44.74 metres. His closest competition was still two metres behind when the final throws were tallied.

Tracey Deline qualified for the Thunder Bay event with her fourth place finish in the 800 metre run. She completed the distance in a time of 2:28.1.

Brian Erwin narrowly missed qualifying when he placed 6th in the shot put competition with a throw of 14.02 metres, his best ever showing in competition.

The remainder of the athletes, Nancy Watson, Brian Reid, Don Ashley, Scott Terrior and Steve Guant had bad days and were unable to qualify.

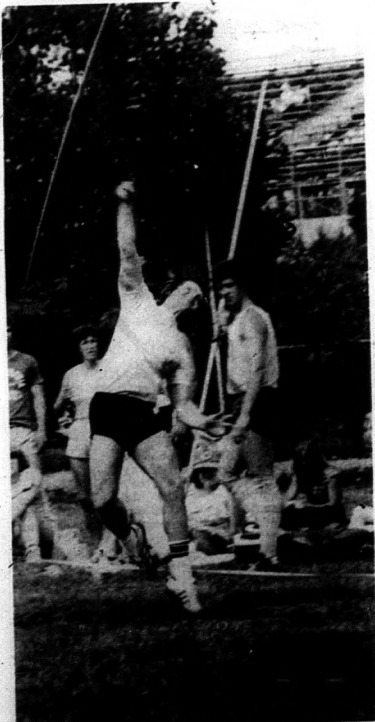

Ted Bergeron [left] propels the discus 44.74 metres to win the event at the Eastern Region Qualifying meet in Kingston last Friday.

Brian Erwin [above] gives this throw everything he has as we see the shot flying out of the top of the picture. This was Brian's best ever throw in competition. Above [left] Nancy Watson makes this jump but had a bad day, failing to place at heights she would normally jump with ease.

Brian Reid couldn't make the javelin carry like normal but he gives it a good try in this picture.

Minutemen drop two decisions to Holloway and Springbrook

By Bev Browning

The Minutemen's record dropped to 1-3 after dropping a 5-2 decision to Holloway and after being out 5-0 by the Springbrook Royals.

In Madoc on Tuesday the Minutemen gave two runs in the first inning on a two-run home run by Bob Ray, and two runs in the second inning on a two-run double by John Hinman. In the sixth inning Holloway scored their final run and left the bases loaded.

The only threat the Minutemen could muster was a two-run sixth. With two out in the sixth inning, Harold Bailey singled, Lorie Kirkwood doubled, and Lynn Hagerman singled accounting for Madoc's two runs. During the game the Minutemen left eight men on base, six in scoring position.

Offensively, Dave Fleming was 2 for 4; Clayt Whiteman 1 for 4; Terry Helps 1 for 2; and Wayne Willemssen 1 for 2. Brian Armstrong took the loss, giving up five runs on nine hits; walked one and struck out seven. Daryl Kramp pitched the seventh and struck out two batters.

In Springbrook on Thursday night, the Royals scored three runs on four hits in the first inning to shut out the Minutemen 3-0. Ron Bateman pitched the shut out while giving up three hits, a double to Kramp and infield singles to Wayne Willemssen and Glen Graham.

Daryl Kramp took the loss. Kramp gave up three runs on seven hits, walked none and struck out four. The major problem with the Minutemen so far this season is their inability to drive in runners who are in scoring position. The pitching and fielding is improving. However, the bats are going to have to get hot to win some ball games.

Word around town is that the Minutemen have a retired farmer waiting in the wings to DH (designated hitter).

Two new players added to the Minutemen roster are Lorie Kirkwood and Ab Reid. They replace Steven Johnston and Harley Willemssen. Kirkwood and Reid can play outfield and infield.

Games scheduled this week: Tuesday, June 2, Stirling Patz vs Minutemen (8:30); Thursday, June 4, Minutemen vs Springbrook Juveniles (7 p.m.).

Tuesday, June 9 - Thomasburg vs Minutemen (8:30)

Royal gift's "mother" from Queensborough

May 13th's paper carried a story about a contest to name four purebred dairy

"I'm honored that they picked one of my does," she said. The Taylors have been goats being sent to Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer as a wedding gift from the Ontario Dairy Goat Society.

One of the goats chosen to be sent belongs to a former Madoc man, Allan Taylor, and his wife, Marilyn (Alexander) of Queensboro. Four purebred registered doe kids representing the major goat breeds, Alpine, Nubian, Toggenburg and Saanen, are being sent. The Alpine choice is none other than an as-yet unnamed beauty belonging to the Taylors of R.R. 4, Peferborough. "I have no idea how they picked the goats to go," Marilyn Taylor said, explaining that there are more than 800 members of the Ontario Dairy Goat Society.

raising goats for 10 years and Marilyn is currently the president of the Kawartha Dairy Goat Association, which has been going five years. The Alpine doe she chose for the wedding present is a little over two and half months old, and is quite a friendly creature with a most captivating face. Because it doesn't have a name yet, it will be registered with a number instead.

The Taylors were very pleased with the idea of the gift and the goat-naming contest, as they think very highly of goats.

"They're very intelligent animals," Marilyn said, totally disclaiming the myth that they eat garbage, and especially tin cans. "They won't eat anything that's dirty. Their grain has to be in clean troughs. For example, they love apples, but if you throw one on the ground, it'll just stay there. We live near the dump so we should know about goats not eating garbage, but sometimes I wish they would. They certainly go through a lot of grain."

Marilyn explained that the goats are all hand raised by herself, which is evident when they all come running to her and start talking to her.

"I'm their mother," she says. "I bought some cattle ten years ago, and there was an old goat thrown in with the deal," Allan Taylor said, and now the Taylors have thirty-five does.

"We are now licensed milk shippers," they said. "Our milk goes to the health food stores in Toronto, where it is sold or made into specialty cheeses. At present, we are shipping 2,000 pounds of milk," they reported.

On a global scale, far more people drink goat's milk than cow's milk.

"Is there any other kind?" Marilyn adds mischievously. She thinks it tastes much better than the regular cow's milk, though she does occasionally milk one of her cows for use around the house so they can ship more of the goat's milk. See Goats on page 10

The right front corner struck a tree stump causing $1200 damage to the truck. Beatty was charged with careless driving. Constable J. Ball investigated.

Minimum wage revisions in effect

A two-stage increase in the minimum wage for Ontario's agricultural workers has been announced by Labour Minister Robert G. Elgie. For persons employed in the harvesting of fruit, vegetables or tobacco, new minimum wage rates will go into effect June 1, 1981 and April 1, 1982.

The adult hourly rate currently $2.85 will rise to $3.30 on June 1, 1981 and to $3.50 on April 1, 1982. This rate was last revised in March of 1979.

The student rate will rise to $2.45 on June 1, 1981 and to $2.65 on April 1, 1982 from the current $2.15 per hour. This applies to people under 18, working 28 hours per week or less during the school term or full time during school holidays.

Weekly allowances for lodging and meals which employers may deduct against the minimum wage have also been revised. Rooms rise to $15 on June 1, 1981 and $17 effective April 1, 1982; meals to $1.30 each on June 1, 1981 and $1.40 on

There are lots of things about Danadown continental quilts that are unique.

One is their "Hi-Lift" construction. The walls of the quilt trap the filling, allowing it to loft up to its full thickness.

That means uniform, all over insulation. And no shifting.

The filling stays put in the quilt. The quilt stays put on you.

We'll pay you up to $800 to get off oil heat

YOU'LL SAVE MONEY BY GETTING OFF OIL BECAUSE THE PRICE OF OIL IS ESCALATING, AND WILL CONTINUE TO DO SO.

Heating with oil is a habit Canadians acquired when oil was plentiful and cheap. Today sources of oil are unreliable and increasingly more expensive, so we just have to kick the habit. The habit won't be hard to break because Canada has an abundance of energy alternatives that are plentiful and are ultimately cheaper than oil.

The Canada Oil Substitution Program (COSP), is a major part of the federal government's National Energy Program. COSP is designed to help reduce the use of oil for home heating in every province to no more than 10 per cent of total household energy use by 1990.

COSP is a 10-year program that offers grants of up to $800 covering half the cost of equipment and labour for changing your space or hot water heating system from oil to natural gas, electricity, propane or renewable energy sources such as wood and solar. The COSP grant is taxable.

The oil substitution of a centrally heated building unit that contains two or more self-contained dwelling units can qualify for COSP grants ranging from $1,000 to $5,500.

HOW TO APPLY FOR YOUR GRANT

Those of you who are ready to get off oil, or have switched from oil since October 28, 1980, ask for grant information from:

- your nearest natural gas or electric utility;
- the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources (EMR) office, about conversion to wood or solar heat or another renewable energy source. EMR is located at: 2242 Lakeshore Boulevard W. Toronto, Ontario M8V 1A5
Call: (416) 252-5866 or toll-free: 1-800-268-2207

PLAN AHEAD FOR BEST SAVINGS

To start planning your move off oil, the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources can help you:

- assess your home's energy efficiency by means of a free computerized EnerSave questionnaire;
- insulate your home under the Canadian Home Insulation Program (CHIP) which provides taxable grants of up to $500.

Insulation is not a requirement of COSP, but it makes sense to have a well insulated home before you change your heating system. The better your insulation the smaller-sized heating system you'll need when you switch off oil.

Ontario Professional Motocross results include Black Mountain riders

The first event of the newly-founded Ontario Professional Motocross Series, was held May 24, at Putnam, Ont., near London. The field was full, with all the heavy Canadian talent and a host of U.S. riders in the area for the upcoming indoor Supercrosses at Montreal and Toronto.

The Jones brothers from Picton and Jim Cochrane of Trenton Cycle were the only local riders to venture into the competition. All three frequent the Black Mountain track near Madoc, considered the best in Ontario. Jim had raced the Norm Carr Memorial in Belleville, the night before and was seen sleeping alongside the 401 near Toronto, the next morning, but got himself going to ride a strong qualifying race and enter the final. Up against Canada's best in the 250 cc final moto, Jim was having a good ride when he hit a fallen rider and was forced to quit due to subsequent injury.

Watching Rick and George Jones, was worth the $5 admission fee. Both riders easily qualified their 125 cc Yamahas with George putting on a tremendous charge, finishing fifth, and Rick, overcoming carburetion problems. The 250 cc qualifier was when the show began. George had gotten a terrible start and would have to make up 15 positions in order to qualify for the finals. Duelling with another rider, George had his throttle stick open on a long uphill straight. Coming off the jump at the top of the hill, George and his bike flew over the heads of other riders before crunching into a beech tree, seven feet above the ground. George received a minor hand injury, but his 250 cc Yamaha was completely severed in two. The front wheel, forks and handlebars lay on one side of the track and George was with the rest of the bike, on the other side. Meanwhile Rick qualified his bike for the finals.

In the 125 cc finals, George was shook up from previous crashes and did not break the top ten. Rick put in a very good ride, showing why he is rated number six in Canada for this class. Even with a spectacular finish line crash, while trying to pass another rider before the checkered flag, Rick placed ninth for the day against Canada's best. Canada's number one rider, Ross Pederson of Calgary, won both classes. Next race in the series, is June 21, at Dagmar, north of Oshawa.

Storing gasoline safely

Planning on keeping a little extra gasoline at the cottage this summer for the boat, or at home for the lawn mower?

If you are, Jim Allen,
Director of Safety, Ontario Region, urges you to note carefully these 10 rules for storing gasoline safely.

1. Store gasoline only in a container specifically designed for it.

2. Do not fill a container to the top. Leave an inch or two for expansion.

3. Do not carry a filled container in your car, except to bring it home from the service station. Secure the container so it doesn't slide around or tip.

4. Store gasoline in a separate garage or outbuilding. Better yet, leave it outdoors under a shelter.
Some air circulation is desirable to dissipate any escaping vapors.

5. Keep a gasoline container out of direct sunlight and away from heat.

6. Cap all openings, including vent holes when you're not using the container.

7. A stopper on a pouring extension is not a secure closure. Remove and store the extension after using it.

8. Do not empty a container. A small amount of liquid left inside a capped can forms a vapor rich enough not to explode.

9. If someone swallows gasoline, do not induce vomiting. Call for medical help immediately.

10. Keep the container out of reach of children.

The dear little animals are becoming more popular all the time, Marilyn stated. Hobbyists are now getting into milk production on a larger scale. They can be kept on a relatively small tract of land compared to cows. For instance, 75 goats can be kept on ten acres, she said. There are now almost 100 licensed goats' milk producers in Ontario, Marilyn estimated.

Marilyn teaches a course in goat husbandry at Sir Sandford Fleming College in Peterborough. The course is going into its second year and is full, which is good for a night course, she adds. She stresses the fact that goats are very easy to look after and very clean and friendly animals, although some people erroneously describe them as disease-ridden and hard to maintain.

This goat is owned by Marilyn Taylor (Alexander), formerly of Queensborough and it is one of the goats chosen to be given to Prince Charles and Lady Diana Spencer as a wedding gift. The goat is an Alpine breed but it does not have a name. It will be registered by number. Mrs. Taylor tells us goats are not the unclean animals most people think they are and, besides that, they're very smart.

The annual CHSS Athletics Awards Night was held on Friday night at the Kiwanis Centre and, because there were so many good athletes in CHSS this year, two awards were shared by two athletes.

Nancy Watson won the award for Senior Female Athlete of the Year while the Male Athlete of the Year was shared by Steve Fleming and Brian Erwin. Junior Male Athlete of the Year went to Don Ashley but Tracey Deline and Julie Blakely split the Junior Female of the Year award. Jim Elsasser won the Wally Moffat Award for the student contributing the most to athletics.

Hastings County

The May meeting of Hastings County Junior Women's Institute was held at the home of Linda Richardson. President, Elaine Wallace, opened the meeting with a reading, How to Stay Young. Roll call was How Much We Take for Granted.

A report was given on the May 6th tour of Gibbards' Furniture in Napanee. A group of 17 ladies enjoyed the tour. Our yard sale, to be held in Ivanhoe on May 16, was discussed. Along with good used articles, we will also have a bake table. Ruth McCurdy brought some news about the fall conference to be held in the Niagara Falls area in early October.

Linda Moorcroft introduced our guest, Mrs. Mary Lea Burt, who was involved with the ADAPT conference held in Belleville, May 14th and 15th. The conference was called Focus on Access. ADAPT (all disabled are people too) was established in the area to make the public aware of the needs of disabled persons and to help them understand and cope with problems. Mrs. Burt talked about the logo symbolizing full participation and equality in 1981 — the International Year of Disabled Persons and expressed a hope that awareness will continue in years to come.

Elaine expressed our thanks to Mrs. Burt and presented her with a cheque in support of the conference. Lunch was served and a social hour was enjoyed by all.

The next meeting will be held June 11, at the home of June Hagerman. Our guest speaker will be Marilyn Sewell, Farm Safety Consultant.

$400,000 gamble

Pellet Mill Added

BY JOHN BENNETT

Rod and Sue Hazelwood, of Hazelwood's Feed Mill in Orland have just made a $400,000 gamble that good quality and good service can pay off for them despite the state of the economy. They operate the only independent pellet producing feed mill in Eastern Ontario. They are out to take on the big companies and they say they can win.

The Hazelwoods took over the Orland feed mill in 1975 when the economy was a different ball game but they have worked hard to satisfy the needs of their customers.

The Hazelwoods took over the mill on the advice of an uncle in the real estate business, who told them to look at operating the mill instead of acquiring a farm. "We haven't regretted his advice yet," Rod said last week during a tour of his new facilities.

The mill is about as old as anyone can remember and has always serviced a wide area of the Northumberland farming community, but the equipment was aging and its capacity too small to keep the operation expanding, so the Hazelwoods began to think about improving their plant about 18 months ago.

The plan they came up with had a bill of $400,000, but it meant they could increase their milling capacity from two tons an hour to ten tons an hour. They also installed a pellet mill which includes steam heating equipment, a pellet extruder and a sorter. The machinery means that they can now produce just about any custom feed mixture for any kind of livestock.

For technical assistance and supplies they rely on Shur-Gain, a subsidiary of Canada Packers. "If we need to know something or have need of lab facilities Shur-Gain is there to help us. The company has treated us very well over the years and we're happy to sell their products," Sue Hazelwood said.

Two weeks ago they held a grand opening party to celebrate their new investment. They invited Howard Sheppard, Northumberland MPP, to cut the opening ribbon. They didn't realize that Howard is from Codrington, a few miles north of the mill and had first come to the mill as a child. "I am happy to see that Rod and Sue have the courage to expand in these times. I know they deserve to succeed and I am confident they will."

Early hay is best

For years researchers and extension people have been telling farmers that early cut hay was better quality than that harvested later in the season. Recently an article, researched through the University of Idaho, was published that seems to statistically support this claim. The research relates the cutting date to feed consumption and milk production.

Forage cut at the pre-bud stage was consumed at the rate of 34 lbs. per cow per day on a dry-matter basis. Milk production averaged about 42.5 lbs. daily and grain consumption around 4 lbs. per head per day. Consumption of forage cut at the early bloom stage dropped to 32 lbs. and milk production dropped to 31.4 lbs., while grain consumption increased to 8.4 lbs.

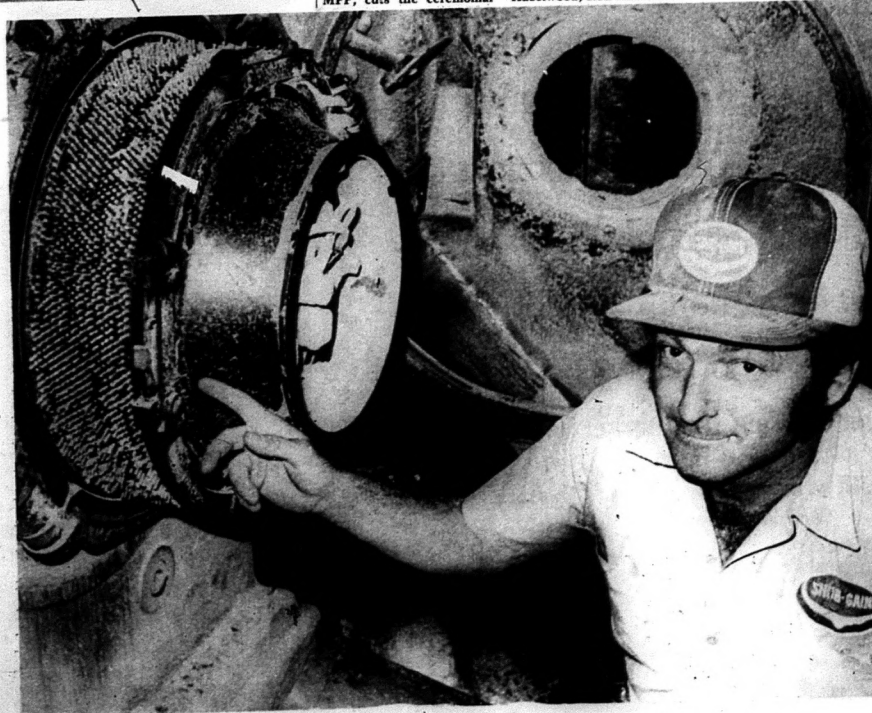

Consumption of forage cut at the late-bloom stage dropped to 27.8 lbs. per day, while milk production dropped to 23.4 lbs. and grain consumption increased to 15.7 lbs. daily. Converting this to dollars and cents for a 100-cow herd, waiting the extra 14 days from pre-bud to the early-bloom stage would mean a loss of 1,100 lbs. of milk or approximately $170 of lost income per day. In addition, there would also be a requirement for approximately 440 lbs. of extra grain which could mean an extra feed cost of $40 or more per day, representing a net loss of upwards of $6,000 per month due to late harvesting of forages on a 100-cow herd.

NOEL'S NOTES

Noel Stockton

I have a strong feeling that I must have told you, at one time or another, that Margaret and I have a brace of grandboys. David, the elder, is now five and Timothy, the minor, is just about eighteen months.

Now when they call you in the early hours of the morning to tell you that you are a grandfather, well, that's something else, that is.

I don't know if you've ever been wakened from a deep repose at 3 a.m. and informed that you are a grandfather.

Of course, we knew perfectly well that Karyn was heavy with child, as it were, and that sooner or later she was going to drop it, but when the time comes, I'm telling you, that's really something.

I had already sent out the warning that I wasn't about to be called grandad, thank you very much, and that when the time came they could refer to me as Uncle Noel, and that's what the new infant could name me, whatever gender it happened to be.

So Uncle Noel I expected it to be.

Not on your life. Karyn thought it might be a little confusing for the kid to have so gross an uncle, and one much older and wiser than the others. She also didn't want the babe to feel that his grandmother was shackled up with one of his uncles.

However, when David was born it didn't turn out to be grandad either. For some unaccountable reason he calls me Bacca, and none of us has been able to figure out why, except that I smoke a pipe all the time, and he associates that with this withered old guy who calls him on the telephone every week.

Anyway, the first born was in fact a boy, and a handsome one at that, but as I said to them all in turn, what could you expect from a guy with a good looking uncle like me.

He emerged weighing seven pounds and nine ounces and he looks like me, which isn't all that surprising really, because Malcolm, his father and I are identical twins, born almost exactly thirty years apart.

Now the funny thing about David is that he was, at the time, the only male great-grandchild that my mother and father would have had if they were still alive today, which they're not.

You see I have three brothers and one sister, and they all have married children who have offspring too. But they're all girls. Six of them. And David Andrew Forsyth is the only boy.

Another thing is that he was born on the exact day on which he was expected to show up, by whatever medical formula these doctors have of figuring out the anticipated date of arrival.

Those of you who are already grandparents will know what I'm talking about if I indulge in a little bit of nostalgia reminiscing, because as I say, although we are now grandparents twice over, I had never been a grandfather before and I can't help thinking back to the times when our own two children were born, and the circumstances that surrounded their immigration to this world, and the things they've done and achieved since their appearance.

Malcolm was the first born, way back in 1947.

You see how it was, I'd been away in Africa and Italy and Europe and other parts of the world from the day Margaret and I were married until the day I got home, which was almost a year after the war was over.

So I didn't get home to my loving spouse until 1946. And Malcolm was born in 1947. Well, what's wrong with that?

He was born in an old-fashioned type nursing home, and when Margaret and I drove up to the front door of this place, the driveway was full of bumps and bounces, and I'm sure they had them put there on purpose so the baby would be shaken out before we got there, thus saving them all a heap of trouble.

The door was opened by an enormous female person with a tremendous head and poppy eyes, who glared at us violently and demanded to know what we wanted.

She almost scared the child out of Margaret before she ever got inside. Then they gave her a broom handle to pound on the floor if there were any encouraging signs of activity during the hours of darkness.

The following morning she gave birth to Malcolm, and neither of them have been quite the same ever since.

And, I remember very vividly how Malcolm went away to school at the tender age of four and a half years, and the first day Margaret tried to leave him there he ran after her crying his little eyes out, and when she went to collect him that afternoon he came out of that school with a bound, in his wee blue school cap, and his blue blazer and short grey pants, with a broad grin on his features from one end of the playground to the other, and when he saw his mother standing there the smile suddenly turned to hot tears without changing the expression on his face, and he hollered all the way home.

It's strange, too, the way things hardly ever change. When he went up for his Bar Admission at the O'Keefe Centre six years ago, he did the same thing. He looked at his mother as they placed the legal diploma in his hand to make him a fully fledged lawyer, and there were tears in the eyes of both of them.

I just blew my nose. Yessir, it's hard to believe they grow so old so fast.

Julie was born under more normal circumstances, in a more orthodox kind of nursing home, but she had hair all over her face for some unexplained reason, and didn't look at all elegant on arrival, so the nurses in the maternity ward were proudly showing off all the other babies and left poor Julie alone, because she didn't look so good. There was this whopping great character born on the same day; a real bonny blighter he was, and Margaret was ashamed because they kept showing him around to everybody in the place, and nobody got to see Julie because she was thin and weedy and had hair all over her clock.

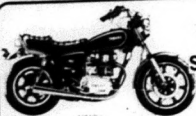

But some weeks later Margaret saw the mother of this portly prince pushing a baby carriage with him in it, and there was this frightful, obese child all bloated and puffed up, and Margaret was delighted because by this time Julie had developed into a cute, narrow, smiling specimen with hair on her head but not on her dial anymore.

But you know, the years go by so quickly.

It only seems like yesterday that they were both living at home and fighting over everything detachable, and Julie was asking Malcolm to help her with her homework, and Malcolm had too many other things to do, like playing with his hockey game and giving a loud, running commentary like Foster Hewitt.

I remember the day Malcolm and Karyn were married. They left on their honeymoon in a car that Margaret and I gave them, and they smashed the thing up on their way to Bracebridge, long before they ever got to where they were going. Neither of them was hurt, thank God, so I didn't worry too much about it.

And Julie was married and the minister was late getting there, and we all had our own personal heart attacks while we were waiting, and all kinds of strange bodies arrived for the food and the booze from the university, all wearing such grotesque outfits it looked like a Halloween caper, especially the guy who came with hair down to his waist, wearing a grey tweed cap which he never took off the whole time.

And the dean's wife who said to Julie, is your mother here and Margaret was standing there talking to her at the time. Oh, quite a do that was.

And sometimes I can't help thinking about the time when Margaret and I, with Malcolm just a wee baby in arms, arrived on the Queen Elizabeth in New York, and it was raining hard at the time and I said to Margaret, I don't like this city very much, why don't we get on a train and go somewhere else. So we went to Grand Central Station and climbed on the first train we saw there, and we arrived in Toronto.

And it was raining there, too.

Malcolm was too young to care what was going on, and it wouldn't have mattered to him if we'd come to rest in Kuala Lumpur.

We got a suite of rooms at the old Frontenac Arms Hotel, now the Carriage House, and we stayed there for a couple of weeks while we looked around, and I recall how we walked out on Yonge Street the first night we were there, and they were just laying the subway there and the street was covered by wooden planks.

And Margaret said to me, Oh my God, she said, what have we done!

They still have wooden streets here, she says.

And I went to work on a service station at Bloor and

Montgomery because I couldn't get a job anywhere else and they paid me forty dollars a week, and the apartment where we were living cost us two hundred dollars a month.

One day a man came onto the service station where I was working and offered me a job with an oil company of which he was the Managing Director, and after I'd been with them for a few years I became the top salesman for Canada, and they sent Margaret and me to New York for an all-expenses-paid, two-week holiday.

It's funny how you get to think about these things at a time like this.

So Malcolm's now a successful lawyer in Niagara Falls and Julie is an actress and married to the Assistant Dean of the Faculty of Fine Arts at the university she attended. But I still think of them as children, and I guess they'll never be any different, both of them, and the fact that Malcolm is now the father of David Andrew Forsyth and Timothy Forsyth, and I'm their uncle doesn't seem to change anything at all.

Yessir. It's hard to believe they grow so old so soon. Isn't it?

Microwaves worth study

There's more to microwaving than pushing buttons. Along with adapting to its speed and convenience, users need to consider new techniques, different timings, and less traditional equipment. To get the most from your microwave investment, food and nutrition specialists with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food recommend taking the time to master the new cooking methods.

A microwave oven uses beams of energy similar to radio waves. They penetrate the food causing water molecules present to vibrate. The resulting friction quickly raises the temperature and cooks the food.

In a conventional oven, you save energy by cooking two or more foods at one time. In contrast, the more food you put in a microwave oven, the longer it takes.

The number of energy waves available at one time is limited; a single food will absorb them all. With two items, the same number of waves must be shared so it takes longer.

Metal utensils should never be used in a microwave. They interfere with the cooking process and may cause "arcing", a shower of sparks that could damage the appliance. Even the bit of metal in some decorative borders on china may cause problems. Use heat-resistant glass, ceramics, glass-ceramics (freezer-to-oven ware) and designed-for-microwave plastics. Ordinary plastics probably won't melt but they could transfer chemicals to the food during cooking. For short oven times, paper plates, wax paper and paper towelling can be used.

Pierce all foods which have a skin or membrane, e.g. egg yolks, sausages, potatoes, squash, and wieners, to prevent bursting as steam develops during microwaving.

Foods should be turned, stirred, or rotated during the cooking process to promote even cooking.

The shape of containers used in a microwave is very important. Round dishes are better than squares or rectangles, but a ring is best. In this, food cooks from the centre as well as from the outside. A wide, shallow container cooks food faster than a deep, narrow one.

Covering foods speeds cooking and prevents splatters. Glass lids, plain china or paper plates, wax paper and paper towels work well. If plastic wrap is used, choose a brand recommended for the microwave. Poke a hole in it or turn back one corner to let excess steam escape. When removing the wrap, start with the edge furthest from you to prevent being burned as steam escapes. Learning to use a microwave is learning to cook a new way. Take time to master the different techniques.

Pigs want your love

What perceptive farmers have known for centuries is now confirmed by scientific research: pigs respond to human affection.

The confirmation comes from a Dutch project measuring the influence of the relationship between the producers and the pigs on the reproductive performance of the breeding herd. Twelve identical one-man breeding farms were used. The project showed that a producer exhibiting a good relationship with his pigs recorded a higher average number of pigs born per year than those farms where the pigs were wary of humans.

The man-pig relationship was measured by the time taken for sows to recommence feeding after being touched by the researcher.

Also gauged was the time taken for sows to approach and inspect the researcher after he entered the pen. Generally speaking, the less time required for both of these measurements indicated a lesser fear of humans by the sow. This information reflected the relationship existing between the producer and his sows.

Breeding performance varied from an average of 16.5 live pigs born per sow per year for sows appearing most wary of humans to 21 offspring when the sows were least man-shy. The most probably factor responsible for this difference was the degree of fear and stress in the sows at mating time. The study thus indicates a direct connection between stress and conception rate.

Church protests pup trailers

Rev. Ed Schamerhorn of Bowmanville was elected president of the 57th Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church in Kingston last weekend. He succeeds Rev. Glen Ashford of Cobourg. Elected president designate was Rev. John May of Pembroke.

A petition protesting the use of pup trailers on Ontario highways during the winter months and a concern over proposals for even larger combinations came before the conference for the third year.

The trailers, involved in several fatal and costly accidents, are still permitted despite a 1973 coroner's recommendation and the conference protested this again this year. However, the proposal for 105-foot combination has been denied by the government.

The conference also supported the proposal by the Ontario Secondary School Headmaster's Council for revised cannabis marijuana legislation which now also has the support of 11 other provincial and federal organizations.

Robin Lane, the outside observer at the conference, suggested one reason the church was having so much difficulty with the report on human sexuality was that it had forgotten the Old Testament. Mr. Lane is at the national office of the United Church in Toronto, on exchange from the Presbyterian Church in New Zealand.

"There is a richness and experience of the human body and a reality of the power that lies in it in the Old Testament which has been forgotten," he said.

A request from the floor asked for more communication between the national office and the "grass roots". The complaint expressed concern over the gap between constituencies.

The conference ordained seven new ministers at a special service Sunday evening. They included Arthur Mack of Kingston, Jan Markwart of Belleville, James McKee of Chalk River, Claus Thompson of Perth, Betty Lynn and Robert Schwab of Peterborough and Robert Throop of Oshawa. Rev. John Lock of Peterborough was accepted into the United Church from the Anglican Church of Canada.

Eight ministers and one lay supply were honored on their retirement. They included Rev. Redvers Brown of Arden, Rev. Frank Hobbs of Trenton, Rev. William Kennedy of Hope Township, Rev. Rob Roy McGregor of Brockville, Rev. Lennox Paul of Eganville, Rev. John Roundell of Greenbank, Rev. John Smith of Whitby, Rev. Margaret Errey of Bridgeport and Mr. Maitland Jackson of Plevna.

Wood energy alternative

Eastern Ontario could provide more than a million dry tons of wood and wood waste each year to turn into energy, an Ontario Ministry of Energy draft study has found.

The preliminary information, prepared by management consultants Peat, Marwick and Partners of Toronto, will be available as a public report this summer. It indicates that the counties of Lanark, Ottawa-Carleton and the United Counties of Leeds and Grenville have the annual potential to provide, at $50 a dry ton or less:

- 400,000 dry tons of poor quality natural wood;
- 320,000 to 450,000 tons of wood from hybrid poplar plantations;
- 115,000 tons of forest industrial mill waste;
- 130,000 tons of logging residues.

The consultants' recommendations include examining the conceptual design and estimating the costs of providing in the vicinities of Perth, Carleton Place or Edwardsburg:

- a 10-MW co-generating facility — which would produce electricity and steam;
- a 60-ton-a-day methanol demonstration unit;
- the infrastructure for fuelwood supply and distribution.

The plants recommended for further study would use less than 35 per cent of the potential supply of natural wood and wood waste identified.

The recommendations were in the first part of a $120,000, four-phase study to determine the feasibility of expanding the industry based on renewable energy from wood and wood waste in Eastern Ontario. W.W.

Hall of Opeongo Forestry Service Ltd. of Renfrew assisted in the first phase of the study along with C.D. Shultz Ltd., forestry consultants from Vancouver.

"This first phase only serves to illustrate the great potential of energy from wood waste or, even more exciting, from hybrid poplar plantations," Energy Minister Robert Welch said today.

The recent BILD (Building Ontario for the 1980s) program outlined the government's aim to advance the hybrid poplar program beyond the current research and development stage and begin commercial production with large-scale planting and harvesting. The Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources will encourage the development of a number of commercial-scale plantations by the private sector during the next five years in such places as Cornwall, Maitland and Carlsbad Springs.

Natural Resources Minister Alan Pope said the Edwardsburg study shows that, "as well as providing valuable energy, harvesting of forest biomass for energy will promote better management and use of Eastern Ontario forests."

"And up to 300 direct jobs may be created just to harvest, and transport the forest wood supply."

Norman Sterling, Minister without Portfolio and MPP for Carleton-Grenville, welcomed the first part of the study, saying that "hybrid poplar is a promising crop for possibly one million acres of currently under-utilized land in Eastern Ontario."

Hybrid poplar grows quickly and can be used for pulp and other forest products as well as being an energy crop.

The consultants are now using the information gathered in the first part of the study to start on the second phase — an evaluation of the engineering design and costs of each proposed energy production facility. Phase three will compare the costs and revenues of the facilities at the suggested locations. The final phase will examine the social cost/benefits of the proposals — including both local economic development and the impact on Ontario's goals for a secure energy future.

Co-ordination takes time

BY CATHERINE MILLER

Whenever we dial a number on the telephone, turn on a light switch, brush our teeth, or write a letter, we are using a vital and uniquely human skill — the ability to use tools. To dial a phone number or switch on a light, we would use our principle tools — our hands. To carry out the act of brushing or writing we would hold an object, in these examples a toothbrush or pen, to expand the tool function of our hands. By manipulating objects or "tools" we are able to shape the environment we live in according to our needs and desires.

When babies begin to wave their arms and swipe at objects they can see, they are learning that objects can be used to make things happen. "When I touch the mobile with my hand I can see it move and hear music!" Eventually this waving and hitting motion develops into the mature skills that allow us to manipulate very small and very complex objects as we carry out our daily routine. We are speaking of the development of fine motor skills — those actual acts of manipulation involving the co-ordination of the eyes and hands.

In the newborn manipulative skills are wholly uncoordinated. For the first six weeks of life, a baby's hand weeks are usually curled up in little fists. While she will tightly grasp any object placed in the palm of her hand, she has no control over this grasping, it is one of the reflexes she is born with. Similarly, a newborn will open her eyes wide and stare at just about any object you place in front of her eyes, but she needs to practice moving her eye muscles together slowly in order to follow a slowly moving object. At this point in time the eyes and hands are not yet working together.

In the first six months of life, however, a dramatic improvement takes place in the baby's ability to co-ordinate what the eyes see with what the hands do. Until this point mouthing (moving the tongue and lips over objects) has been used to gather information about the infant's world. It is the desire to mouth objects that encourages the baby to reach for and voluntarily grasp articles that are within her view.

One's own hands and feet are usually first and favorite playthings. The random movements of baby's arms and legs bring the hands and feet in and out of view. This provides her with opportunities to practice looking, reaching and grasping. It doesn't take long before she can accurately reach a target, grasp, handle and mouth the object in a smoothly co-ordinated sequence. She is counting on you to supply all kinds of interesting objects to explore.

In the course of handling objects, the baby is taking in a lot of information about her world. She learns that arms and hands must be held in different ways, depending on the shape, size, weight, location, hardness and softness of the object being handled. By 6-9 months she is beginning to understand that by changing the movement of her fingers she can change the qualities of an article. Tearing, pulling, pushing, poking, crumbling, rubbing, sliding, stacking, folding, twisting, pinching, scratching, scraping, all become part of her growing supply of fine motor skills.

As these skills become more refined, baby's interest moves from the way things look and feel to "how do they work?" Toys that have many parts, especially moving parts are particularly fascinating in the latter half of the first year. Such toys encourage the baby to hold onto two or more things at once, to compare pieces, to bang them together, to try to fit one piece inside another. Dropping and throwing things to the floor provides a special lesson in how things work, not only do they move in different ways but they also make different sounds when they land — sometimes you end up with more pieces than you started with!

It is in the how do things work stage that the ability to use objects as tools really blossoms. By pressing a lever, jack-in-the-box appears; by turning a knob, doors open; by pulling a string, toys come closer. She is now very interested in watching the way you handle objects and imitating the things you do. For example, she may imitate hugging a doll, pushing over a tower, wrapping up a toy. All these activities provide her opportunities for using her fine motor skills and understanding events in the world.

Expert answers insurance questions

The first in a new series of Public Service Columns dealing with insurance problems and sponsored by the Independent Insurance Agents and Brokers Association of Ontario.

Q: "I'm confused by all the various kinds of automobile insurance coverages. Can you explain them to me very simply?"

A: If you injure someone or cause damage to someone else's property, liability insurance protects you against the potentially ruinous financial consequences. Liability insurance has been made compulsory by the Government of Ontario. If you or anyone riding in your car is injured in an accident, in most cases the accident benefits coverage includes a payment to the estate of anyone who dies, a payment to anyone who is maimed, the costs of all medical treatment not covered by OHIP, even a payment for loss of income to anyone who can't continue to work as a result of an accident. Like liability insurance this is also compulsory.

If your car is damaged in an accident, collision insurance pays to have it repaired or replaced. This is an optional coverage. Whether you should have it or not depends on the value of your car. If it's more than five years old you may not want to bother. Most often, with collision insurance, there is a "deductible". This means that you agree to pay the first $100 or $250 of any damage to your car. The insurance company pays the rest.

If your car is stolen, damaged by vandals or fire or other causes, your comprehensive coverage protects you. This coverage usually has a $25 deductible. Personal belongings in the car are not covered by the automobile insurance policy.

These then are the four kinds of car insurance that are available. Liability and accident benefits are compulsory. Collision and comprehensive coverages are optional.

Before you decide on a renewed or new insurance policy for your car, why not seek the help of a professional, independent insurance agent/broker? There's one in your community. He or she is a fully trained insurance professional with the answers you need to help you choose the right policy from the right company at the right price.

United Co-operatives of Ontario (UCO) has divided Ontario into nine zones with a director elected from each zone. In addition, three zones are arranged into a group and the group also elects a director — thus the 12-member UCO Board of Directors. Each term of office is for three years — and a director can serve only four consecutive terms. Zone elections are held at Fall Zone Meetings in November, and the group elections are held in conjunction with the Annual Meeting, held in the first half of December.

ONE FOOT IN THE FURROW BY BOB TROTTER

Foreign control worries writer

Foreign companies, the press release said, control more than half of Canada's food processing industry.

More than half? According to a report from the federal agriculture department, foreign companies control about 65 per cent of the fruit and vegetable canning industry, about 46 per cent of the frozen fruit and vegetable industry, 32 per cent of the dairy processing industry, 65 per cent of the flour milling and breakfast cereal business, 52 per cent of candy making, 54 per cent of the soft drink industry and 25 per cent of the livestock and poultry feeds industry.

Years ago, the famous industrialist, E.P. Taylor who organized Argus Corporation, one of the largest of its kind in Canada, said he didn't have to own a company to control it. In fact, he proved that even a 15 per cent interest in a company went a long way to controlling it.

That corporation has tentacles in literally dozens of businesses across Canada. It is not famous for being generous. But it is a Canadian-owned company. Its chief executive officer, Conrad Black, is a former newspaperman.

Because it is Canadian-owned, it may be a little more amenable to Canadians.

But the fact that foreign-owned companies control so much of the food processing industry is disturbing to the long-time observer of the Canadian agricultural scene. I was well aware that foreign ownership was high, but not aware it was more than 50 per cent.

If Canadians need any more good reasons why farm marketing boards are necessary in this country, this foreign ownership question is the best one.

Farmers, when organized through legislation open to them, could become this country's best defence against these huge conglomerates. Only through marketing boards are farmers able to wield a degree of clout when it comes to selling their products.

I would venture to say that the executive officers of these foreign-owned companies cry, almost to a man, that marketing boards are a curse to mankind. Those guys hate marketing boards, especially supply management boards, because those boards give farmers a modicum of power.

The multi-national companies are eager for power. They want all they can get and they are frustrated when farmers get some of that power. They do not like it.

They want it all. When they get it, they can control everything we eat, right from the time it is planted to the time it reaches our tables. When that much power is concentrated in a few hands, as it is in Canada, it is too dangerous. Only marketing boards and a watchful government can prevent that power from corrupting.

Canadians have always welcomed foreign capital. I suppose we should continue to do so. But that capital often brings long-term and open-ended obligations such as constantly repaying and then simply paying out all profits.

Author of the study done for Agriculture Canada, Pamela Cooper, said that instead of spurring competition here, the clout of the foreign company may, in fact, contribute to less innovation and lower productivity since multi-national firms tend to concentrate their research and development spending in their home market.

Certainly, that statement has a hefty ring of truth as far as Canada is concerned.

While I'm talking about marketing boards, I find it difficult to understand why everybody is getting so uptight about plans to slaughter hens to cut egg production in this country. The market is glutted with eggs. So farmers are simply laying off a few million workers: hens.

General Motors has laid off a few thousand workers, too, and the price of cars has gone up.

What's so bad about laying off some hens?

Farm machinery can be lethal

Farm accidents claimed the lives of 50 people in 1980 and farm machinery was once again the biggest culprit says the Farm Safety Association of Ontario's annual fatality report.

Equipment-related deaths accounted for 80 per cent of the total. In 1979, the association's fatality report listed 44 farm accident deaths and almost 90 per cent of these involved farm equipment.

"The number of equipment-related fatalities usually increases by three or four each year as farm machinery becomes more complex and harder to operate," says Larry Swinn of the association.

Also, once again last year, tractor rollovers caused more deaths than any other type of accident. Rollovers caused 28 of the 50 fatal accidents.

The biggest part of the problem, says Mr. Swinn, is that operators don't react properly when they are faced with an emergency.

On the sidle, he says, operators often steer uphill when the tractor starts to roll. They should be steering downhill to counterbalance the roll - steering uphill just makes the tractor roll faster.

A tractor can roll over backwards in 1.5 seconds after the front wheels leave the ground unless the operator hits the clutch or brakes. Backward rolls are usually caused by hitching equipment too high on the tractor or by popping the clutch.

Rollovers can be prevented, says Mr. Swinn, if operators use proper operating procedures. Also, all tractors should have proper roll protection.

Rotation recommended

Crop rotation has several advantages, but many vegetable growers today are either so crop-specialized that rotations are of little value, or they have insufficient land for effective rotation with soil or green manure crops. Historically, crop rotation has been used primarily to take land out of cultivation periodically: to rest a portion of the land from crop production for one or more years by planting it, usually to a legume-containing sod. This procedure builds up the organic matter which increases the soil's water-holding capacity, improves fertility, reduces leaching of nutrients, and helps protect the soil from erosion by wind and water.

To some growers, continuous cropping seems like the only practical method of farming in today's economy. The short-term returns may be greater, but in the long-term soil productivity and moisture retention decrease.

Crop rotation is also used to control certain fungi, bacteria, and nematodes that cause plant diseases. Some of the disease organisms that are controlled by a rotation will live in the soil for only a short time (perhaps one to two years) in the absence of the crops they attack. Such rotations are effective, however, only where an unrelated crop is rotated with another. For example, do not rotate tomatoes with peppers, cauliflower with broccoli, cucumbers with squash, etc.

Anthrachnose of bean is an example of a disease that can be reduced by crop rotation. The anthracnose fungus survives in the soil about as long as it takes the bean refuse in the soil to decompose. Therefore, a two-year rotation with a crop that the fungus cannot attach is effective in starving out the fungus. However, other precautions are needed to ensure that anthracnose fungus is not re-introduced into the soil, such as the use of disease-free snap bean seed. Care should be taken not to spread bean straw or trash on the land.

Rotations are not effective against many other disease organisms for different reasons, mainly because some fungi, such as those causing cabbage yellow and onion smut, survive in the soil for a very long time. Moreover, many diseases are introduced or spread by wind-blown spores, insects, and other means which rotation will not control.

More recently, some vegetable growers have rotated crops to help weed problems. For example, sweet corn is planted in tomato or cabbage fields infested previous years with nightshade or other weeds not controlled by tomato or cabbage herbicides. The use of certain corn herbicides helps to clean up the existing weed problems, and the field may be returned to production of tomatoes or cabbage, etc. provided no corn-herbicide residues remain in the soil. Much less troublesome and more satisfactory control would be obtained if effective new herbicides were available to vegetables growers. Also, many growers are not prepared to plant a different crop because their equipment, facilities, and marketing outlets do not allow it.

Tractor horsepower needs interpretation

Ask three farmers the horsepower of a tractor and you'll likely get three answers: brake, PTO and drawbar. All three systems of measuring horsepower are valid, but may not answer the important question, "How much work can it do?"

Technically, a horsepower (hp.) was defined by James Watt about 200 years ago, as the power required to lift 33,000 pounds one foot in one minute. If the speed is increased to lift the weight two feet in one minute, the force required will be two hp.

Brake hp. - sometimes called flywheel, or maximum hp., is the ultimate power developed by an engine without driving the alternator, water pump and fan, hydraulic pumps for power steering, brakes or auxiliary equipment or for any driving mechanism, in other words, the maximum hp. available from a stripped engine. Obviously, all of this horsepower is not available to use for work.

PTO horsepower is the hp. available at the PTO with tractor in a stationary position, but with the necessary components, eg. fan, water pump and alternator in operation. This is approximately 8 to 10 per cent less than brake hp.

Drawbar hp. is usually 8 to 10 per cent less than PTO hp. since the added rolling friction of the wheels and the power required to drive the transmission and differential is now subtracted. The drawbar hp. may therefore be up to 20 per cent less than brake or maximum hp. If you are buying solely on a dollar per hp. basis, there may be a wide difference between dollars per brake hp. and dollars per drawbar hp. Many years ago, Nebraska enacted that all tractors sold in that state must pass specifications set up by the University of Nebraska. These tests have become accepted on an international basis. All tests are conducted under similar test conditions. Therefore, although the test conditions are not actual farm conditions, the results are relative, and accurate comparisons can be made.

All tests are made at the manufacturer's recommended engine speed. In addition to the PTO and drawbar tests, the fuel consumption in gallons and pounds of fuel per hour at various power levels is measured. Tire slippage and other data are also noted.

All of these factors, as measured by the Nebraska tests, should be taken into account when purchasing a tractor.

Horsepower is important, but it must be considered from the practical standpoint of "usable horsepower," measured at the PTO and the drawbar.

Pesticides need care

A continual war is waging in agricultural production to reduce the losses caused by insects and disease. Experience has shown that lack of pest control can result in varying degrees of food losses. This loss could be as minor as a reduction in quality, or as serious as reduction in yield and, in some cases, no saleable produce at all. Efforts are being made by plant breeders, pathologists, entomologists and many other disciplines to reduce the dependency of our modern food systems on chemical pest control. With present day knowledge, the use of chemical pesticides cannot be avoided for control of many common pests in our food crops.

All pesticides have the potential to be toxic to man and as such they should be treated with great respect. This respect includes: careful adherence to all label instructions, avoidance of spray drift, and safety to all persons exposed to the pesticide. Educational programs conducted by chemical supply companies, safety supply companies, farm safety associations and various branches of federal and provincial governments have greatly increased the awareness of pesticide safety.

One of the major concerns when using pesticides is the safety of the person making the application. The label on the pesticide container is the authority for all safety procedures, and must be read and followed to the letter.

With some pesticides the label will recommend as part of the protective clothing the use of a respirator. This is an approved device that is worn by the pesticide user to filter pesticide pollutants from the air the person is breathing. In the past there has been some confusion about respirators.

To correct this shortcoming in pesticide safety information, the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food will be publishing two factsheets for the spring of 1981: Protective Clothing When Using Horticultural Pesticides in Greenhouses; Protective Clothing When Using Pesticides Outside.

The information contained in these factsheets will be a ready reference on respirators commonly recommended for pesticide use. These two factsheets will join the wealth of information in factsheet form from every Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food office and will also be available from chemical supply outlets.

More than 75 per cent of Ontario's communities now depend entirely on trucks for delivery of goods and services.

New for 1981 is an insecticide - impregnated plastic ear tag. In trials this has reduced the population of horn flies up to 98 per cent. Two tags per animal will reduce horn and face flies. These tags can be used on steers, calves, yearling and milking cows. Research has shown that horn flies can reduce gains of grass fed yearlings by 17 per cent - 30 per cent and that calves weaned from unprotected mothers were considerably lighter than those whose mothers had been protected from horn flies.

SAFETY WITH FARM CHEMICALS - With herbicides changing from im-perial to metric, much concern with the possibility of increased farm accidents has been shown. Although we hope no mishaps do occur, a special meeting has been planned for Tuesday, May 26 - Agricultural Office, Stirling at 8 p.m. in conjunction with the 4-H Field Crop and Farm Safety Clubs. Guest speaker will be Marilyn Sewell of the Farm Safety Association with the topic of Safe Handling of Farm Chemicals.

WEEDS! WEEDS!
WEEDS! - By T. Wayne Martin

New weeds, new problems; old weeds, new problems. Just when we think that we are getting on top of weed control, we find new weeds rearing their heads, and old weeds that are refusing to lie down and die. There are quite a few weeds that now come under the heading of 'Problem Weeds'. Some are:

Triazine resistant broad-leaf annual weeds - strains of lambs' quarters, redroot pigweed, and ragweed have been found that are resistant to high rates of all Triazine herbicides including atrazine, cyanazine, and simazine.

Velvetleaf - is a newer one that has appeared in corn and unless removed before seed sets can spread rapidly.

Germander - is a relative of the nettles and has appeared in Hastings County.

Dogbane

Clammy Ground Cherry - another newer acquaintance in the area. This is only a small sampling of the problems in weed control, or weeds that are appearing for the first time. If you have a problem in weed control that has not occurred before, or if you see a weed that is unfamiliar to you, please contact your Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food office. A newer weed to the area, or one that cannot be identified, will be sent to the Pest Diagnostic and Advisory Clinic at the University of Guelph. They can help us with identification, control and monitor the spread of weeds. Let's hope you don't have much to report in 1981, but if you do we will find out what it is.

PERCENTAGES! PERCENTAGES! PERCENTAGES! - one of the problems that comes from statistics is that what we think of as a fact is reported in terms of percentages. Percentages only indicate trends. They don't give factual numbers and they unfortunately don't identify the areas where things are happening. For example: if two things happened in 1980 and three happens in 1981 of the same kind, it means there has a 50 per cent increase but it doesn't tell us the where, when or why. One of the real problems is to identify where some of these things happen and particularly identify them by areas or counties. In the farm world the question of bankruptcies is predominant. In the next item our Federation notes refers to an increase but the question is how many cases does it represent and what does it mean in terms of corrective action as to the number of people involved and their financial situation. It is something to think about.

4-Hers going to camp

A crew of 100 teenagers, six ships, and an admiral will invade an island on Lake Catchacoma June 19, but their goal isn't pillage and plunder, it's self-improvement.

4-H agricultural members aged 16 to 19 from across the province will attend a one-week leadership camp at Camp Catchacoma, about 60 km. north of Peterborough.

The camp is organized on a nautical theme with participants and staff divided into six ships. A captain and a first mate are selected for each ship and an admiral directs the entire fleet.

"Our goal is to develop the leadership skills of young people," says Amber Gibbons of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food extension branch. The participant work in groups so they can learn how groups work and understand different types of leadership.

"Hopefully, the participants will also get to know a little bit more about themselves over the course of the week," says Miss Gibbons.

The days at the camp are divided into three sessions. The morning session is devoted to leadership training. The afternoon is geared toward small group interest activities such as crafts, canoeing and career planning, and the evening session of programs is put on by the 4-H members themselves for the rest of the camp.

To be chosen as a delegate, a 4-H member must be active in community and 4-H agricultural programs for at least two years. Each county can send from one to five delegates depending on the 4-H membership in the county.

Disease takes over

How many Ontario vegetable growers, fruit growers, or cash crop farmers have had occasion to walk into their fields only to find a disease has suddenly appeared and is ravaging the crop. Yet only two weeks earlier the crop appeared perfectly healthy and vigorous. It is amazing and sometimes even bewildering that leaf blights and mildews in cereals, onions and beans, blue mold in tobacco, or scab in apples can develop so explosively. To help us understand what happens we can compare disease outbreaks to growth of money in the bank.

Many crop diseases increase with time rather like compound interest growth of capital in a bank. Of course, with compound interest, there is interest on the interest as well as on the capital originally deposited. The "interest rates" for disease in a crop are, admittedly, far higher than even the most generous of bankers would allow. Even 100 per cent "interest" in disease every week, let alone every year, is not unusual!

Now we can begin to see what has happened in that crop during the past two weeks. Let the weekly interest rate of disease be 100 per cent and assume that 20 per cent of the leaves now appear diseased. This time last week about 10 per cent of the leaves were diseased. Two weeks ago only 5 per cent were diseased. This might have been noticed if the crop was inspected very closely but probably not during a general inspection.

And what about the prospects for the next two weeks! Around 40 per cent of the crop will be affected this time next week, and 80 per cent the week after. May the interest rates drop immediately!

Interest rates for disease do fluctuate as do those at the bank. Unfavorable weather lowers the interest rate and favorable weather increases it. As crops grow they tend to change in susceptibility to disease. Increased susceptibility increases interest rates, but increased resistance lowers them.

Many of our disease management practices are aimed at lowering the interest rate of disease. Fungicides applied to apple trees, or to crops of tomatoes or onions, are intended to lower the interest rate to a level where disease does not cause economic losses. Crop cultivars that are only a little more resistant to disease fare much better in disease epidemics because of lowered interest rates of disease.

Growers that see early traces of disease in the field might reflect on an exceptionally friendly bank manager who has just offered 100 per cent interest compounded weekly. They might also bear in mind that the banking climate (crop climate) may turn for the worse (better), and interest rates could fall alarmingly (pleasingly). But what if it doesn't?

Overworked seedbeds can cause problems

"Anything carried to excess is a vice." This old adage certainly applies to seedbed preparation.

With the power available on many farms today, it is almost as easy to overwork soils as it is to overwork dry soils. Working any soil when it is too wet does little more than destroy soil structure, compact the seedbed and root zones, and create poor growing conditions throughout the season. On the other hand, excess working of dry soils pulverizes the soil surface and hastens soil erosion by wind and water.

Extra working of a seedbed "just to fine it down" very often makes the field look better but, other than making it a little smoother travel during the first cultivation, it does little more than help to seal the surface over more quickly when it rains. This decreases the rate of water infiltration into the soil surface and increases runoff and erosion.

Working soils when the moisture content is right can actually aid in creating good soil structure. However, overworking soils during seedbed preparation is not only unnecessary but in most cases, it is detrimental to yields and profits. It is a costly exercise that wastes time, money, and topsoil. This is to say little of the unnecessary wear and tear on machinery.

Just because we have the power available and time on our hands doesn't make the soil ready to work any sooner in the springtime.

Good seedbed preparation requires that a farmer fit three management factors together: seed, equipment, and soil. It is good to remember that soil serves as a seedbed for only about 5 per cent of the growing season. The other 95 per cent of the time is devoted to the soil acting as a rootbed.

Good seedbed preparation demands an understanding of the soil and the self discipline to resist the urge to work it too soon, too deep, and too often.

Scientists rediscover manure

A manure analysis can be a valuable farm management tool for the livestock farmer. When handled correctly, manure can provide the majority of the nutrient needs of a crop of corn, cereal grain or mixed hay. As energy and fertilizer become more expensive, manure will become more valuable as a fertilizer.

Livestock use roughages and grain to produce marketable milk and meat. But during this process they use a small part of the nutrients contained in the feed. The majority of the nutrients can be found in the manure.

Manure varies considerably in composition because of the type of feed, the kind of livestock, and the method of storage. By saving the liquids, keeping out rain and storing in tanks or on concrete pads, most of the nutrients are conserved.

The Ministry of Agriculture and Food and the Soil Testing Plant Analysis Laboratory, Department of Land Resource Science, University of Guelph, provide an analysis service for soil and manure samples. The soil testing service provides fertilizer recommendations are reduced when it is indicated on the soil sample information sheet that manure has been or will be applied, based on average analysis of manure from various classes of livestock. The manure testing service provides an exact analysis of manure with corresponding values of nitrogen, phosphate and potash available in the first crop year. Sampling kits are available for $1.50 from your local Ministry of Agriculture and Food office. The manure analysis cost varies from $13 to $16 depending on the number of nutrients analyzed.

Your Ministry of Agriculture and Food county office has information available on soil and manure sampling techniques, kits and the interpretation of analysis. Maybe it's time you found what your livestock manure is worth.

How do hedges grow?

"Help your hedges to a healthy start this season by giving them special attention now," says Bob Fleming, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food horticulturist.

"Most of the plants we use for hedges can be pruned severely in the spring to stimulate new growth," he says. "By thinning out the old wood and leaving the sturdy, young wood, you can achieve a thicker hedge." Deciduous hedges, particularly privet, alpine currant and honeysuckle, can be pruned back to within 30 cm (1 ft) and even 15 cm. (6 in.) from the ground and allowed to grow again.

Unlike deciduous shrubs, evergreen hedges should be allowed to achieve most of their new growth before pruning. June is the time for this annual pruning.

"Evergreen hedges should get a little bigger every year," says Mr. Fleming. "Shear back half of the new growth each year. Don't prune back too far — the new growth is usually sparse on old wood."

When pruning any type of hedge, trim the hedge in a wedge shape so that the bottom is wider than the top. This allows light to reach the lower leaves and results in a hedge that is full right to the bottom.

Mr. Fleming also recommends a spring application of a general purpose garden fertilizer such as 5-10-15, 7-7-7, or 10-10-10. Application rates for hedges are listed on fertilizer package labels.

"The easiest method of applying fertilizer is to apply it along the side of the hedge," says Mr. Fleming. "Cultivate it into the ground lightly, and water it in if the ground is dry."

MOWER-CONDITIONER

High performance under tough conditions.

When the IH Mower-Conditioner is into heavy crops it works hard, clean and fast without strain. Yet it's just as thorough and clean in light crops, too.

The power train is simple and basic, for more direct power and less maintenance. The big, 44 inch diameter reel adjusts to ground speed and crop conditions. And a controlled floatation platform means even cutting on contours and slopes.

You get cleaner cutting at higher speeds — for more production per hour.

So come on in and see all the features of the mower-conditioner offering high performance under tough conditions.

Tunney Elected to Milk Marketing Board

Milk producers in Region 5 - that area including Ontario County east to and including Northumberland County - recently elected Jim Tunney as their regional representative on the Ontario Milk Marketing Board. The election results gave Jim Tunney a total of 240 votes. Don Dunford, Peterborough County, 138 votes, and Bob Reeds of Victoria County, 54 votes.

Jim Tunney, a Grafton area Guernsey breeder, has been involved in many organizations over the years. A well-known Guernsey breeder, he has been a director of that association, and a representative on the Dairy Farmers of Canada for a number of years. He has been a member of the Northumberland County Dairy Committee and is currently chairman of that group. He has also served as director and chairman of the county Soil and Crop Improvement Association and is a member of the school board. We wish him all the best in his new position.

Alfalfa Weevil Alert

Most farmers who grow alfalfa in Ontario are familiar with the damage that the alfalfa weevil or larva can cause. Most of the destruction is caused by the larva as it feeds on the leaf buds and leaves of the young alfalfa plant. The severity of the damage will depend on many factors, including weather conditions and weevil parasites. Weather conditions strongly influence the life cycle of the weevil. The cycle from the egg through to the mature or full-grown larva is much shorter in a period of high temperatures than with cooler temperatures. In a normal year, the larva hatch more or less coincides with the harvest period for alfalfa so that the most effective control is to harvest the alfalfa plant. However, in an early warm spring such as experienced a few years ago, the larvae may do considerable damage before the alfalfa plant is mature enough to harvest. Conditions this year have been the reverse. For the most part, the alfalfa weevil hatch has been delayed due to the cooler than average temperatures experienced earlier in May. This has allowed the alfalfa to develop and mature. Farmers should be on the lookout now for fields which are infested with this pest and they should be the first fields harvested. A periodic check of the fields - particularly knolls or areas where the soil type is lighter - should indicate the stage of development of the pest. The young larvae are normally found in the bud area near the top of the plant and this is the area that should be checked closely for damage. A few days of warm weather can speed up the growth of the larvae and result in considerable loss of plant material. A heavy infestation will severely shear the leaves and destroy all but the leaf veins and stems so that the field will take on a greyish hue. Normally the alfalfa weevil is a first-cut problem although growers who cut early should examine the second cut for possible second-generation damage. If regrowth shows signs of larvae damage it may be advisable to use one of several insecticides on the market which offer good control of the larvae. Further details on the life history and control of the alfalfa weevil are available through the local offices of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Trucks carry three out of every four tons of freight, all or part of the way. They haul 48 per cent of inter-city freight, or more than 60 per cent measured in value.

Centre Hastings, Bridgewater do well at Special Olympics

The track and field team from the Centre Hastings Retraining Centre in Madoc was a surprise to everyone except coach Shirlene French at the Special Olympics meet held in Belleville over the weekend. The team was led by a determined Vernon DeMille, who collected three gold medals in the shot put, ball throw and soccer kick and added a bronze in the 400-metre relay.

But the Centre Hastings team wasn't the only surprise nor were they the only team to produce an athletic hero. The Bridgewater athletes proved to be a dominant force on the field as Rose Anne Corey of Marmora led the team with nine firsts and one second, a feat that should land Rose Anne a trip to Ottawa and the national championships in July.

The Centre Hastings team started off with a bang on Friday as they placed one, two, three in two events. Vernon DeMille of Marmora, Stan Merchoff of Marmora and Fred Hill of Ivanhoe took the top three spots respectively in shot put while Stan Merchoff was edged by Lorne Ostrum for second spot in the soccer kick with DeMille again placing first. DeMille and Merchoff then finished first and second in the ball throw. Debbie Caldwell placed third in the shot put and the ball throw.

Royal Ingram, Vernon DeMille, Stan Merchoff and Murray Sweet placed third in the 400-metre relay. On the Bridgewater team, other athletes were also turning in good performances. Shirley Bovard of Flinton placed first in the standing long jump with a distance of 1.6 meters, she placed first in the 200-metre run and was second in the high jump and ball throw. Ron Yorke of Madoc first in the shot put, second in the 400-metre run and third in the ball throw, high jump and standing long jump.

The Special Olympics, sponsored by the Belleville Lions Club, gave many of these athletes their first chance to compete in events similar to these and it was their first chance in many cases to mix socially and stay in different accommodations overnight. One 65-year-old man commented that they should have had motels when he was in the army. The athletes were very relaxed during the competition, but the dance on Friday night and the music after the competition ended on Saturday showed just how much the athletes enjoyed music.

There were unique new experiences also. Everyone got to hear Bobby Hull open the ceremonies, the kids listened to their names being called by a CJBQ celebrity, and, for once, they were the centre of attraction. Spirits were high throughout the day. All of the athletes used this competition to meet new friends and names like Terry LeBlanc, Rose Anne Corey, George, Annabelle Keller and Roland Langstaff will be remembered for quite some time.

But several of the people from the Centre Hastings Retraining Centre said the best part of the Special Olympics was simply that the athletes were taken out of a work-oriented atmosphere and given a little freedom to kick up their heels. It was an amazing metamorphosis that affected the supervisors as much as the athletes. Their joy was contagious to the point where everyone cheered for the other athletes, regardless of teams. It was an example of athletics at their best that would have served as a good lesson to all of us.

Vernon DeMille, Fred Hill and Stan Merchoff collect Centre Hastings first sweep of the medals. The team did surprisingly well considering the practice facilities they were forced to use and the limited time they had to practise. At this point, Vernon DeMille is still eligible for the fifth athlete to go from these games to the nationals in Ottawa in July.

May was busy month, June will be too

May was a very busy month for the staff at Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Centre Hastings. 25 children were taken to the Tweed Circus. We would like to thank the volunteers that drove the children, supplied popcorn, and candy and made such a wonderful evening for all.

A picnic at O'Hara's Mills was arranged for the single parent support group. The kids fished, played ball and ate, while the parents supervised and talked. It was a beautiful day and a beautiful spot. We are very happy to report two excellent matches were established and we are sure they will flourish.

Two staff members attended a work shop in Burlington for Big Brothers and one staff member attended a work shop in Sault Ste. Marie for Big Sisters. We are looking forward to the month of June and ask for your continuing support.

These are some of our plans for June - Wonder and a child's dream. Big Brothers and Big Sisters of Centre Hastings have arranged for a bus to take many happy boys and girls, accompanied by parents to just such a place in Toronto on June 21st. An open house will take place in Marmora on June 8th, 7-9 p.m. at Bowes and Cocks, for interested men and women to drop in and find out just how easy and rewarding it is to be a Big Brother and Big Sister. We welcome any enquiries at 473-4620 Monday - Friday 10 am - 4 pm. There will be a meeting of the single parents support group - time to be determined later. A board meeting will be held June 10th, 7:30 pm in the Madoc Council Chambers. Come and hear what this great organization is all about. Everyone welcome.

CREDIT UNION THRIVES

The Marmora and District Credit Union (MDCU) celebrated its 20th birthday last week at its annual meeting by announcing the largest membership ever - 96 - and a dividend on member's savings of 14 1/4 per cent.

The MDCU originally relied mainly on Marmora Mine employees for its membership. Since the mine closed in 1978, it has moved out into the community to attract members. Anyone living or working in the Marmora-Madoc-Havelock-Stirling area is eligible for membership. A minimum deposit of $5 entitles a person to all the privileges of the credit union, although voting members must be over 16.

When the mine closed, there was a move to close the organization, but membership under Secretary-Treasurer Gordon Bennett has grown steadily ever since.

As in a bank, all money in the credit union is government-insured. The difference between a credit union and a bank is in the variety of services offered and the fact that the credit union is run by its members. Directors and officers are elected from the membership and all major decisions are subject to approval by the members at the credit union's annual meeting.

The MDCU operates out of the Marmora Insurance Office and is open 9:30 to 5:30 weekdays and 9:30 to noon on Saturdays.

Services provided to members include: Savings or Shares which qualify an individual for membership. Instead of paying interest on savings, the credit union declares a dividend on shares at the end of each fiscal year. Three years ago this was six per cent. The dividend for 1981 is 14 1/4 per cent.

Term deposits guarantee a certain interest rate for money on deposit for a set period of time. The length of time can vary between 30 days and five years in amounts of $500 or more. Current interest rates are in the area of 10-11 per cent a year.

Loans are available quickly in amounts up to $2,500 (this is governed by the total of MDCU assets, so the maximum available for loans grows as assets grow.) Ten per cent of money to be loaned must be on deposit at the time of the loan. The MDCU Credit Committee must approve all loans, which are life insured.

The MDCU has one employee (unpaid), Secretary-Treasurer Gordon Bennett. At last week's annual meeting, members voted unanimously to double Mr. Bennett's salary.

Minutemen even record

Madoc Minutemen last week downed the Stirling Patz 5-2 and shut out the Springbrook Juveniles 2-0 to improve their record to 3 and 5.

On Tuesday night, Harold Bailey's two-out double in the fifth inning drove in three runs to break a 2-2 tie with the Patz.

Madoc opened the scoring in the third inning when Ab Reid doubled, driving in Eric Bailey who had singled.

The Patz took the lead in the top of the fourth with a pair of runs on three hits. In the bottom of the fourth,

Robert Nickle's home run to centre field tied the score at 2-2.

Singles by Dave Fleming, Clayt Whitman and Ab Reid led to Bailey's heroics in the bottom of the fifth.

Daryl Kramp gained his first run of the season. Kramp gave up two runs on five hits, walked none and struck out five.

In Springbrook on Thursday night, the Minutemen scored one run in the fourth and one in the seventh in gaining a 2-0 victory.

Action committee formed

It's a democracy, isn't it?

BY JOHN BENNETT

Last year some Scarborough residents discovered to their alarm that they were living in a radioactive dump site used by a company to dispose of radium tailings thirty years ago. They were downright angry that the federal and provincial agencies responsible would allow such a thing to happen. So they yelled and pushed until they got the Atomic Energy Control Board (AECB) and the Ontario Ministry of the Environment to agree to remove the contaminated soil — some 6,000 tons of it. They were happy with the solution but that solution has created a new problem.

Without contacting the local governments or having any public consultation, the AECB and Ministry of the Environment decided that the ideal resting place for this potentially dangerous stuff would be the tailing piles at Madawaska Mines near Bancroft. After all, the soil is less radioactive than what is there already. Why not stick it there and why bother to consult with local residents?

This is supposed to be a democratic country, and is one reason why not. Local communities must have the right to be consulted before, not after, decisions are made. Things as dangerous to a community and its economy as radioactive waste are important to every local resident and therefore they should be consulted prior to decisions that affect them.

Another good reason why not, is the precedent set by establishing a radioactive waste dump behind closed doors. It is true that the Scarborough soil is not as dangerous as the spent fuel bundles in Hydro's reactors and storage ponds, but a final resting place will have to be found for them soon, too. Will the governments responsible simply decide on a place and move in the bulldozers? If they can decide on this behind closed doors, why not other decisions even more important?

Another reason is the Eldorado Nuclear plant at Port Hope which is always looking for a place to put refinery wastes which contain uranium, radium and arsenic, all of which are dangerous. If Madawaska has room for the Scarborough soil, then a million or so more tons won't hurt.

In response to this decision the people of the Bancroft area are angry. They have formed the Bancroft and District Action Committee. The committee has called upon the federal and provincial governments to pass legislation that will outline, in advance, the procedures for creating a nuclear dump — procedures that will include consultation with municipalities. We support them.

Rollins, Pollock speak at waste meeting

In response to public outcry in the Bancroft area over the proposed dumping of radioactive soil from Scarborough at Madawaska Mines in Faraday Township, a public meeting was called for concerned citizens Thursday May 28th, 1981 at North Hastings High School. With only two days' notice, the classroom hired for the meeting overflowed to the cafeteria with approximately 150 people in attendance. Speakers included Clarke Rollins, former MPP for Hastings-Peterborough and Jim Pollock, current MPP for this riding.

Out of this meeting the Bancroft and District Action Committee (BDAC) was formed to try to resolve this matter with the interests of the community in mind. At this committee's first meeting, held the next evening, it was resolved that: the Bancroft and District Action Committee has formed to oppose disposal of imported radioactive waste in this community and will take any action necessary to prevent such disposal.

It was also resolved that: the committee calls on Provincial and Federal governments to establish legislation for safe permanent disposal of radioactive waste in consultation with the local municipalities involved.

To these ends BDAC has scheduled another public information meeting to present all sides of the issue to public scrutiny.

This meeting is to be held Thursday, June 11th, 1981 at 7:30 p.m. at North Hastings Senior Elementary School in Bancroft. The BDAC has sent invitations to the following to attend: Ministry of Health, Ministry of Natural Resources, Ministry of Labour, Ministry of Environment (Federal and Provincial), Members of Parliament for Hastings-Frontenac, Victoria-Haliburton, Hastings-Peterborough, Quinte; Chairman of the Atomic Energy Control Board, Members of Provincial Parliament - Hastings-Peterborough, Victoria-Haliburton, Renfrew, Warden of the County, Pollution Probe, Energy Probe, National Coalition for Nuclear Responsibility, Former Minister of Environment - Jim Taylor, Bancroft and District Chamber of Commerce, Madawaska Mines, Bancroft Fish and Game Club, 28 Township Councils from the surrounding area.

It is the concern of this committee that a dangerous precedent will be set by the AECB decision to carry out this dumping without the approval of area residents and municipalities, especially in view of the fact that there is no proposed permanent site to locate radioactive wastes in the province.

Bancroft is primarily a tourist area and the fear of becoming known as Ontario's nuclear waste dump has area residents outraged. It is the hope of this committee that enough people will attend this meeting to cause the government to reconsider its position.

UCWs gather at Quin-Mo-Lac

On June 3rd the UCW groups of Bethesda, Madoc, Queensboro, Eldorado and Thomasburg gathered at Quin-Mo-Lac Camp for a pot luck dinner, which was enjoyed by all. The camp leader, Mr. Burr, gave a very informative talk on Quin-Mo-Lac camp which all ages enjoy for year round camping.

Our meeting started with a sing song. The first hymn was 125. Scripture was read by Ila Mullett. Hymn 105 was sung. A reading was given by Mrs. Bailey of Madoc called "Making Grape Jam." A reading was given by Mrs. Patrick called "My Day". Eldorado read a poem "Ten United Church Women." Mrs. Goldie-Holmes of Queensboro read her poem "My Quilt" and "My Rock Garden". Thomasburg gave a reading "House Hunting". Mrs.

Marjorie Holland of Bethesda gave a reading "Ordeal of a Man Hunting for Something in Lingerie Dept." Mrs. Bell gave a reading from the Bulletin Board called "Management." Our collection was turned over to the camp.

The meeting closed with the Benediction.

"I do not pray for a lighter load, but for a stronger back."

S A F E T Y

H U N T E R S

H U N T E R S

Sheryl Henderson is accepting congratulations, from Conservation Officer, Randy Brooks, at the Ministry of Natural Resources office in Tweed last Wednesday afternoon, when he presented her with a certificate and crest following a test for the Hunter Safety Training Course.

Five of eleven passed recent ministry exam,

and that's the way they want it

In April, John Mitchell and Richard Parks spent three nights instructing eighteen people in safe hunting and gun handling techniques at a hunter's safety/course at Centre Hastings Secondary School. All first-time hunters and any hunters under the age of 21 must take and pass this course before they are given a hunting licence.

Of the eleven people from this class that wrote the exam during the month of May, only five passed. That's less than a 50 per cent success rate and that's the way the Ministry of Natural Resources wants it. They want to be sure that only safe and knowledgeable hunters are participating in a sport where not even one mistake is allowed.

John and Richard, don't pull punches. They'll tell you the course is hard and that you will need to study, above and beyond the course to pass. They'll tell you that they will cover the material on the course in the first two nights of the three-night course and they reserve the third night for a Ministry of Natural Resources film on safe hunting practices and for a visit from a ministry representative. The rest is up to you!

The first

On the first night of the course, you'll get two little books called Hunter's Handbooks I and II. John and Richard say that if you listen while taking the course and then study the books well before you take the test, you should be able to pass even though you need to get eleven questions wrong to fail the course.

Once these books are in your possession, the course begins in earnest and one of the first things you learn is the ten commandments of hunter safety. You'll be told that you will have to know these commandments to pass the course.

You learn.....

You learn rifle actions, calibres, handling, identification of game, rifle care and just about anything else you may need to know to hunt safely and properly. You may even learn that "hunting" with a camera can and has been construed as hunting illegally, although you will be advised that this would only happen in very severe cases of harassment or at the discretion of the warden. You'll be told it is a good idea to learn the ministry's definition of hunting before you go hunting.

The second

On the second night of the course, you will be asked to give a few of the ten commandments of hunter safety, you'll review what you learned the previous night and then you will learn about actions in rifles, safeties, gun carrying positions and many more little details that you may not have learned in that first and only lecture from Dad when you got your first gun.

The third

The third night is highlighted by the film from the ministry which puts you in some actual hunting situations and leaves the choice up to you. Shoot or don't shoot. When the film is over, you will have likely found that you made the one mistake you are not allowed in hunting. You fired the gun in a dangerous situation. Hopefully that one mistake is the only one you ever make, although it won't be because you still have to write the exam. Even instructors had a high failure rate the first time they wrote it.

Women do better

Another thing that John and Richard have found over the years is that women do better on the exam than men. They explain this phenomenon by telling you that women taking the course may never have hunted before and they know they are green. They listen better and they study harder, and it pays off. The men may think they learned it all from listening to Dad or other hunters, but they may have picked up bad habits.

Earlier courses

If you took earlier hunter's safety courses, you may find it hard to believe that this exam is hard. If that's the case, take the test and see. They won't take your licence away from you.

although you may feel guilty about having one. When you send your son to the course, go with him and write the exam too

The course isn't as easy

as it used to be

OPP report

During the week of May 31 to June 6, officers of the Madoc Detachment investigated six traffic accidents resulting in $3,000 property damage. Four of these accidents were of a minor nature, while two were more serious and resulted in one person being killed. Seventy-three general occurrences were investigated which resulted in seven persons being charged with liquor violations, two persons charged with impaired driving and two persons charged with possession of a narcotic.

Friday, June 5, at 7:50 a.m. on the Cleveland Road, Tudor Twp., Collesta P. Pederson, RR 1, Eldorado, was eastbound driving a school bus. The bus went over a knoll causing two students sitting in the back of the bus to become airborne and strike the back of the seats in front of them. One of the students, Mary Ellen Donaldson, 17, RR 1, Eldorado, did not feel well after the incident and was taken home. She was then taken to Belleville General Hospital by her mother where she died. Constable R. Garrow is investigating. Saturday, June 6, at 5:50 p.m., a car driven by Irene V. Empey, 35, RR 4, Madoc, was eastbound on the Old Marmora Road and a car driven by Michael J. Glembski, age 27, RR 2, Marmora was westbound. Both cars sideswiped causing ing $500 damage to the Empey car and $800 damage to the Glembski car. Both Empey and Glembski were charged with failure to share the roadway. Constable A. Borger investigated.

Canada-U.S. agreement

Health and Welfare Minister Monique Begin and Richard Schweiker, U.S. Secretary of Health and Human Services have signed an Administrative Arrangement to complete a Canada/U.S. Agreement on Social Security.

The Master Agreement was signed in Ottawa during President Reagan's official visit in March.

The Canada/U.S. Agreement is the fifth of its kind for Canada; others have been signed with Italy, France, Portugal, and Greece. This Agreement is the most important in terms of numbers. As many as 20,000 persons could receive benefits from Canada in the first year of implementation.

The agreement will come into force as soon as both countries have completed the necessary ratification procedures.

The agreement will coordinate the operation of Canada's Old Age Security Act and the Canada Pension Plan with American programs which provide old age, disability and survival. See Canada on page 5 enefits. It will assist s between the two countries in a number of ways.

Persons who work, or who have worked, in Canada and in the United States will be able to combine social security credits earned in the two countries in order to satisfy the minimum eligibility requirements for benefits from one or from both countries. In this way, the agreement attempts to correct situations where a person would be ineligible for social security benefits due to a gap in coverage resulting from a move from one country to the other.
The agreement also provides a means of calculating the amount of the benefit to be paid by each country in accordance with its own legislation. The amount of the benefit will be based on the social security credits earned by an individual in each country.

The elimination of duplicated coverage is also an important feature of the agreement. It will ensure, where possible, that individuals will contribute to the program of one country only, rather than to the program of both countries at the same time. This will be particularly helpful to such persons as truckers, ministers of various religious denominations and professional athletes, many of whom are currently required to make social security contributions both in Canada and in the United States.

Finally, the agreement will relax conditions for the payment of benefits outside the paying country.

 Showers are dropping in on our community for our bride to be Miss Debbie Foster. A lovely kitchen shower attended by about 40 ladies took place in the home of Mrs. Lois Hannah. A miscellaneous party was held for Debbie at the home of Mr. & Mrs. Angus Andrews. This was attended by most of the community and we thank Christine and Viola for all their work. We wish both bride and groom zillions of years of happiness.

WHY ONTARIO FARMERS PREFER MASSEY-FERGUSON 200 SERIES TRACTORS.

All the features that have made Massey-Ferguson tractors a farming tradition are built into our rugged 200 Series family. Pick your power from 6 basic models, ranging from 34 to 81* PTO hp. They provide outstanding fuel efficiency, reliable hydraulic systems and excellent range of working speeds; plenty of comfort and convenience and a whole lot more. Improved traction through superior weight distribution means maximum operating efficiency and easy access features mean faster maintenance and servicing.

Hydrostatic power steering. World Famous Ferguson System - 3-point linkage with draft and position control, adjustable front axles and foam float or spring suspension seats are all standard equipment.

And of course the 200 Series Tractors are covered by the Massey-Ferguson warranty with extended coverage for 2 years or 1500 hours, whichever comes first.

We'd like to show you why Ontario farmers prefer the Massey-Ferguson 200 Series. If you'd like a demonstration on your farm,

Farm workers have right to organize

The National Farmers Union Executive has reaffirmed its policy supporting the right of Canadian farm workers to organize.

At a meeting of the executive held in Saskatoon, May 27-29, concern was expressed over reports of active farmer opposition in some parts of Canada to efforts by farm workers to seek organization status.

NFU Region 3 Co-ordinator, Marie Bright, said it is hypocritical to recognize and support the right of other workers in society and farmers to organize, but deny the same right to farm

New fisheries assessment unit located in Bancroft

The Ministry of Natural Resources has set up one of Ontario's Fisheries Assessment Units at Bancroft. Known as the Haliburton-Hastings Fisheries Assessment Unit, it is the fifteenth of twenty-eight such units to be established as part of Ontario's Strategic Program for Ontario Fisheries, more fully known as "SPOF". The new unit is located at the district office in Bancroft. Unit biologist, Dave Loftus, and senior technician Chuck Brady have been working since September to make it operational.

The assessment units will not, in any way, take over the regular fisheries programs that the ministry conducts across the province. What they will do, however, is to make more sense of what is happening to our thousands of lakes, and provide managers with the information they have desperately needed.

The Haliburton-Hastings Fisheries Assessment Unit will direct its attention at nine lakes. These are Meach, Hicks, Whyte, Turtle, Dickey, Dropledge, Koshlong, Twelve Mile and Drag.

There is nothing special about these lakes. They have been selected because they represent certain fish community types that have different stresses acting upon them. They include brook trout, lake trout and bass lakes and are subject to angling pressure, acidification, fish species introductions, and water level drawdowns.

While unit staff will monitor the stresses affecting the fish communities, it will be more difficult to establish the precise effects they may have. Fish population sizes must be estimated and changes in growth rates, diets, death rates and the incidence of disease must be measured. Observations must be made on all components of the fresh water ecosystem including aquatic plants, insects, loons and the water itself.

This must all be done without placing any additional stress on the fish community. Emphasis will therefore be on the use of live trapping gear such as minor traps, trapiets and seines.

Over the next few years, the Haliburton-Hastings Fisheries Assessment Unit will develop and refine its programs and be brought up to full strength.

Unit staff look forward to discussing their work with outdoors groups and cottagers' associations in the Haliburton-Hastings area.

Babies particularly sensitive to smoke

Cigarette smoke can get into your baby's food — and possibly affect his or her future appetite, the Ontario Lung Association cautions.

The unusual research finding in support of this hypothesis is the work of psychologist Frank T. Etsorn of New Mexico Institute of Technology. Researcher Etsorn advises young parents that their infants are particularly sensitive to cigarette smoke because:

— the brain's barrier to drugs (nicotine), as well as the liver's ability to detoxify nicotine, is much less developed in newborns and infants;

— nicotine very probably stays in the infant's body longer and is more active... and, as such, is potentially more toxic.

Using laboratory mice for his experiments, Etsorn went on to postulate that even in small amounts nicotine can make infants nauseous. "If the nausea occurred at the time the infant tried a new food — or even several hours afterward — the child may subconsciously associate the food with the feelings of nausea," the researcher continued.

The result: "The baby rejects this food in the future."

Etsorn further added, "Remember, nicotine is a toxin... and just 5 microliters on the skin of a 40-gram mouse will kill the animal."

Your local lung association — the Christmas Seal People — urges parents not to smoke in the same room as their children. Better still, not to smoke at all. Your lung association can help people to kick the habit.

Farm workers have rights

Bright said that minimum wages, whether they apply to contract work, or hourly basis and conditions and standards of employment, such as hours of work and housing were basic areas of abuse in some sectors of the farming industry that need to be righted to erase the bad public image farm employment has earned over the years.

The NFU Co-ordinator stated that organization among farm workers also could mean that skills of workers might in future be classified and upgraded by their union and assist in providing the kind and quality of farm labor farmers require.

The NFU executive said it recognized that some farmer opposition to organization is based on their inability to recover higher costs through the prices they receive for their products, however the means of doing so through organization and orderly marketing exist in most instances and must be accommodated.

Goldie goes to Toronto for Quilt Toronto '81

Once again Goldie Holmes went to Toronto, this time as guest at the official opening of "Quilt Toronto '81" conference in Glendon College, Bayview Avenue on May 27.

This was a combine effort of Etobicoke Quilter's Guild and North York Quarter, and was an all-across Canada affair.

Goldie had been a guest speaker at these two Quilter's Guilds on separate occasions and enjoyed meeting those she had met before as well as people from Saskatchewan to Nova Scotia.

There were approximately 250 delegates who participated in the work shops on Thursday and Friday. There were many beautiful quilts and wall-hangings. There were some exhibits from the United States but these were put in the gallery which was not open to the public until Thursday morning, so Goldie did not see them.

The Wall-hangings Goldie had on display were The Studio and The Rock

and Mrs. Phillip Ash and Elaine in Brampton.

Mrs. Goldwin (Jessie) Holmes and Mrs. Will Lynn visited Mr. and Mrs. Tom Lynn in Tweed on Monday.

Mrs. Pat Villeneuve, Maurice and Amie of Sebringville visited Mr. and Mrs. Alex Clarke on Saturday.

Mrs. Roberta Ramsay returned home after being a patient in Peterborough Civic Hospital.

Mrs. Arthur Holmes, also Capt. and Mrs. Phillip Ash and Elaine of Brampton, visited Mrs. Lena Ash at Green Acres Home on Saturday.

A number of ladies attended the UCW meeting at Quin-Mo-Lac Lodge on Wednesday. It started with a pot-luck dinner.

SPECIAL OLYMPICS

BY ROSS LEES

In many ways, the endurance and participation in the Special Olympics Region 12 track and field meet, sponsored by the Belleville Lions Club was a disappointment, unless of course you consider the fun athletes had during the competition.

It had been hoped that somewhere around 300 athletes would compete from the region. Between 150 and 200 athletes did attend. It was also hoped that the public would get out and support the event. They didn't, but that didn't take away from the fun the athletes had in the well-organized and highly successful first-year event in Belleville. The Lions did a superb job of organizing and presiding over the events. They deserve a great deal of credit for working on the project and it is hoped they will see fit to organize a similar meet next year.

The participation list included ARC Industries from Belleville, Cobourg, Trentham and Lindsay plus D'Arcy, Cobourg, Aldon, Ajax, Morven, Lennox and Addington, Bridgewater School, Incolite, L'Amable, Prince Edward County AMR, Wilfrid R. Kirk School, Belleville and Centre Hastings Training Centre of Matilda.

The athletes participating in the swimming and track field events showed many all spectators who did not realize that they not only compete, some of them are very good in their individual events. But winning was not the main theme, participation was and the athletes gave everything they had. They loved the competition and the people close to them gave them lots of encouragement. Placing fourth was no disgrace as long as the athletes did their best.

The Special Olympics were run much like the Olympic Games many of us have watched on television. An athlete, Greg Parkhurst of Belleville, carried the Olympic torch and presented it to Bobby Hull, who officially opened the games. The games began on Friday with the pool events while the track and field events took two days to complete. But besides the actual competition, there was the social aspect of the games as well. The athletes mingled for meals and all enjoyed the dance held on Friday night. For many of the athletes, this was their first break from a strictly work-oriented existence and it was an ideal time for their teachers and instructors to evaluate their charges in a new environment. The evaluations had to be that competitive and social events of this nature bring out the best in these people and that the contact with the outside world is good for both sides.

It is unfortunate that only five athletes from this region will advance to the Canadian Championships in July in Ottawa. Terry LeBlanc of Morven and Rosanne Corey of Bridgewater led the track and field competitors by winning nine or ten gold medals each, and should be nominees for the national events, as well as two athletes from the swimming events. The fifth athlete will be chosen from a dozen others who won multiple ribbons but the criteria for choosing this athlete was left wide open. Another factor in deciding which athlete will go to Ottawa will be whether or not that athlete came close to the national record in his or her event.

ONE FOOT IN THE FURROW BY BOB TROTTER

Rural reminiscences highly recommended

Farmers nowadays are technologists.

"I hear them discussing such things as cost efficiency: weight gain ratios, nutrient values, fertilizer formulae and genetics with obvious knowledge and understanding. And in their daily work they use mechanical equipment of astonishing cost and complexity."

These are words quoted from a delightful little booklet which arrived at our home last week. It's called Down On The Farm and is written by H.B. Disbrow, a former teacher who has been retired for a number of years.

I term it delightful because it is a nostalgic glimpse of farm life in Western Ontario during the years from 1901 to 1925. It is published by Phelps Publishing Co., 87 Bruce St., London, Ont.

H.B. Disbrow is an old friend of mine. He taught in Elmira and was principal of the high school here for 20 years before retiring. The 16 chapters in the book are vignettes, really, glimpses of what it was like down on the farm in the early days of the 20th century.

A chapter on those everlasting pesky chores is a delight to read and will, I'm sure, be read with a chuckle and a grin by anyone who has ever had anything to do with a farm. Although my early years were spent on the farm, I do not go back as far as Harold Disbrow. But those pesky chores were a dreadful part of life even for eight-year-olds in the Dirty Thirties.

He recalls an era of which I have no recollection but many older citizens can remember: road work. It was a form of municipal taxation. Farmers were required to contribute a designated amount of work each year to keep country roads in reasonable condition. The amount of work was determined by the size of the farm and the frontage involved.

I wonder how many city people contributed to the building of roads in their boroughs? It suggests to me that many of the country roads still being used were probably kept recognizable as roads by the farmers in the township.

H.B. Disbrow is a native of Elgin County in Ontario. His education included a stint at the Ontario Agricultural College, now part of the University of Guelph. He taught, would you believe, at a college in Izmir, Turkey, for a couple of years before coming back to Canada. By 1932, he was a teacher in the town of Stirling in Eastern Ontario and then at Simcoe in Norfolk County before coming to Elmira.

"I could hear the sound of crosscut saws, milk splashing into pails, smell Model T exhausts and feel winter winds and the welcome heat of a glowing box stove when I read Down On The Farm," said Derek Wing of the University of Guelph.

When I came to Elmira more than 25 years ago, one of the first people to contact me as editor of the local newspaper was H.B. Disbrow. He was active not only in education but in recreation. He and his wife were the chief officers of the local recreation committee. I have fond memories of this couple who went out of their way to help me. I was an experienced editor-reporter but a stranger then in a small town.

He had an imposing exterior, almost aloof. When you knew him, you knew a warm, kind man dwelt behind the twinkle in his eyes.

The book speaks of sugaring off, of haying time and harvest, of threshing bees and cheesemaking, of little one-room schoolhouses, of the rural itinerants who used to ply up and down country roads, of death and dying and of life and vigor at the turn of the century in rural Ontario.

For anyone with an interest in Canadiana, these 16 essays provide an interesting look at life when farming was a lot simpler and perhaps more wholesome than it is today.

I wish, though, that he had included a chapter in the book on the remittance man. I recall helping him to edit such a story a long time ago. The remittance men were a large part of rural Canada years ago and his story was yet another glimpse of life when it was simpler and less complicated than it is today.

And if you have to ask what a remittance man was, you are not familiar with rural Canada from 1901 to 1925.

WOODS WATER & WILDLIFE

What are rules for?

BY RON REID Federation of Ontario Naturalists

"Ontario has some of the best unused environmental legislation in North America." This observation by one of Canada's leading environmental lawyers was reinforced once again by the Davis government's recent actions on Highway 404.

The 404 Expressway stretches north from Toronto into the rolling hills around Markham and Richmond Hill. In 1981, another 4 miles were scheduled for construction. But although the approval in principle for the highway had been given years ago, the specific details of location and design fall under the provincial Environmental Assessment Act. The Act requires a thorough review of the highway plans by other ministries and the public before construction can proceed.

In this case, many of the concerns related to the crossing of a major wetland area, including an area known as White Rose Bog which had been a favourite location for rare plants. Despite some grumbling about the inadequacy of the environmental assessment documents provided by the Ministry of Transportation planners, the government reviewers okayed the project. But one member of the public, a botany student named Steve Varga, did not, and requested a hearing. But to his surprise, he found that construction was already under way, totally ignoring the legal process contained in the environmental legislation.

The highway builders had been caught red-handed, and public pressure was building for an injunction to stop the illegal construction. Instead, Premier Bill Davis announced that the Cabinet had suddenly exempted the project from the Environmental Assessment Act. This unprecedented move is probably the single most damaging act to date in undermining environmental law in this province. It appears to establish the principle that if environmental legislation becomes inconvenient, you simply exempt the project in question. No doubt we will be seeing other major projects in future, with potentially far more harmful effects, suffer the same fate in the name of urgency or economy. The long slow backtracking from the Environmental Assessment Act to the Environmental Exemptions Act has taken one more step.

SWIMMING POOL TIPS
Lorraine Says:

Insect bites can be deadly. Don't take lightly a child or adult that has been stung. If the stinger is still in the flesh, scrape it off rather than pinch it to prevent injection of additional venom.

Watch for any sign that an allergic reaction is taking place, if so get medical help! Practice good housekeeping with lids on trash containers, rinse spilled pop and keep glass out of the pool perimeter.

ACW meets in Kingston

Bishop John Bothwell, Diocese of Niagara, provided the more than 200 delegates attending the 14th Annual Meeting of Anglican Church Women, Ontario Diocese, with much food for thought and challenged them to provide answers and solutions to many of the problems facing Christians today.

The theme of the conference, which was held June 3 at the Heathfield Retreat Centre, Kingston, was Needs vs Wants - Ours and Others.

Bishop Bothwell said that within our lifetime the world has changed catastrophically according to some people, and it is still changing at a rate which seems to be accelerating, and some of us are worried what to do about it.

He said "Most of us are privileged people. We do not think of ourselves as rich, but we are in the top five per cent of the most well-to-do people who have ever lived on this planet." At the same time it is apparent that as we become more affluent our generosity remains static or lessens. The number of Canadian taxpayers claiming the $100 automatic deduction for charitable gifts has risen from 70 per cent to 92 per cent, and the average charity giving of confirmed Anglicans last year was $108 when the average disposable income was $19,850.

Citing the annual United States military budget of $450 billion, Bishop Bothwell noted that the military expenditure for half of one day would finance the entire malaria eradication program for the whole world, and half of one per cent of the world's military expenditure for a year would buy sufficient farm equipment to provide relief from suffering in the Third World by allowing them to be self-sufficient in food production by 1990.

Bishop Bothwell commented that because the problems in the world today seem so immense, and we are so few, that we feel inadequate. He made three provocative statements - who we listen to determines what we hear; where we stand determines what we see and what we do determines who we are.

He invited the delegates to form into small groups for a discussion period and the questions and comments from those groups formed the basis for the Bishop's closing remarks.

President Miss Constance Fraser presented her annual report, outlining the various activities that have taken place over the last year and announced a National Women's Conference for all Anglican women to be held May 13-16, 1982 at the University of Manitoba, Winnipeg. Each diocese will send 11 women and a committee has been set up to promote the conference in Ontario diocese and to help select and prepare the delegates.

The Ontario Diocese Women's Unit has been asked to be host for the National Women's Unit conference in the fall of 1981.

Miss Fraser will remain as president of the Women's Unit executive for the coming year. She has campaigned vigorously for the president of the Women's Unit to be allowed to attend the Diocesan Synod and to have voting privileges, particularly in matters which relate to the concerns of women in the diocese. She announced that a step forward appears to be imminent and it appears that the president will be attending synod, but will not have voting privileges.

Vice-president for 1981-1982 will be Mrs. Kay Thompson, Collins Bay; recording secretary, Miss Nancy Jarret, Kingston; corresponding secretary, Mrs. Jean Hubbard, Kingston; treasurer, Miss Margaret Poole, Brockville.

Area Chairmen will be Mrs. Norma Fisher, Leeds-Grenville; Mrs. Trudy Duncan, Frontenac; Mrs. Linda Schaub, Quinte. The position of Area Chairman for Hastings has not yet been filled and Mrs. Edith Murray will continue until a replacement is found.

The Thank Offering amounted to $3,054.99. The Bishop's discretionary fund will receive $500; The Henry Budd Centre, La Pas, Manitoba, $1,000; Camp Hyanto, $500; National Conference for Ordained Women, $200 and $500 will be set aside to defray expenses of delegates to the 1982 National Women's Conference. The balance will be directed to Fair Share.

Devotions were conducted by Mrs. Joan Rhind of Odessa.

In the evening Bishop Bothwell was the preacher at a Eucharist at St. George's Cathedral and the conference concluded with refreshments in St. George's Hall.

TO THE EDITOR

The Otonabee Region Conservation Authority would like to extend congratulations to you and your staff on the publication of the "Summer Vacation Guide". It is a fine effort and will undoubtedly assist everyone who plans a vacation in the Kawartha and surrounding area.

The authority would like to correct an error on page 28-B regarding the Warsaw Caves. The caves are not privately owned, rather they are owned by the authority, a locally autonomous corporation, established in 1959 under Ontario's Conservation Authorities Act. The authority is composed of representatives from fifteen municipalities plus three provincial government appointees. User fees for the authority's areas are: $15 per bus, $2 per car per day or $13 for a Season's Pass.

Insurance answers

Q: "I realize that automobile insurance is a necessity. But as a good driver, isn't there anything I can do to get lower premiums?"

A: "Yes, most definitely. First though, let me explain some of the factors that determine your particular rate.

It's governed largely by your age, the area in which you live, the kind of car you own and the amount you drive it. There's not much you can do about these factors. But your insurance will come down in cost the longer you have a safe driving record.

Five years of no accidents can cut your insurance rates by as much as 50 per cent.

Good drivers pay less. Conversely, bad drivers pay more. Four or more minor convictions in the last three years, even if there are no permit points involved, or, one major conviction for something like careless driving or, driving while impaired, can result in a surcharge and affect your premium rates.

Statistics show that teenagers and young people in their twenties have a higher percentage of accidents and more expensive accidents than people over 25. The rate for each category of driver is based on the record of these drivers. There are ways, however, you can reduce your insurance costs.

Taking an approved driver education course can earn you a lower premium. Many high schools have them. It also helps if you don't buy a car with too much muscle, or a more than usually expensive one.

As with other drivers, of course, the longer the under-25 driver goes without an accident, the lower the insurance premium."

INCREASE

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS

EFFECTIVE JUNE 1, 1981 THE RATE OF RETURN ON ALL CANADA SAVINGS BONDS HAS BEEN INCREASED TO 16¼% PER ANNUM FOR THE 5 MONTH PERIOD ENDING OCTOBER 31, 1981.

The rate of return for each subsequent year until the Bonds mature continues to be 10½%. This rate will be reviewed at the time the terms of the new 1981/82 Series are announced this Fall.

(Cut out and attach to your Bonds.)

CANADA SAVINGS BONDS RATE INCREASED TO 16¼% EFFECTIVE JUNE 1, 1981 TO OCTOBER 31, 1981.

With this increase, the annual return on all unmaturing Canada Savings Bonds for the year which began November 1, 1980 is 13.85%—interest at the rate of 11½% for the first 5 months, 13¾% for the next 2 months and 16¼% for the remaining 5 months.

SERIES DATED BEFORE 1977

Series dated before 1977 have a bonus payable at maturity. Holders of these Series will receive the higher rate of return through an increase in the value of this bonus payment. The new bonus amount per $100 Bond of each Series is as follows:

Series	Maturity Date	Cash Bonus at Maturity
1968/69	Nov. 1, 1982	$17.48
1970/71	Nov. 1, 1981	$10.37
1972/73	Nov. 1, 1984	$24.33
1973/74	Nov. 1, 1985	$29.69
1974/75	Nov. 1, 1983	$ 9.87
1975/76	Nov. 1, 1984	$13.30
1976/77	Nov. 1, 1985	$17.77

Bondholders who redeem these Bonds prior to maturity will not be entitled to the cash bonus but only to the original return payable, as printed on the Bond certificates. Bondholders may continue to cash interest coupons each year and be entitled to the cash bonus.

SERIES DATED 1977 TO 1980 INCLUSIVE

For these Series the annual rate of 13.85% will apply for the year which began November 1, 1980, instead of the rate printed on the Bond certificates. Each $1,000 Regular Interest Bond will now pay $138.54 interest on November 1, 1981.

In addition to regular annual interest at the rate stated above, Compound Interest Bonds will earn compound interest at the rate of 11.21% for the 1977/78 and 1979/80 Series, 11.32% for the 1978/79 Series and 11.14% for the 1980/81 Series—these rates are the new average annual yields from November 1, 1980 to maturity of each Series. With this increase, each $100 Compound Interest Bond grows to the following value at maturity:

Series	Maturity Date	Value at Maturity
1977/78	Nov. 1, 1986	$245.01
1978/79	Nov. 1, 1985	$209.39
1979/80	Nov. 1, 1986	$211.92
1980/81	Nov. 1, 1987	$209.50

NOTE: The 1980/81 Series of Canada Savings Bonds was withdrawn from sale effective May 29, 1981. Terms of the new 1981/82 Series will be announced this Fall.

NOEL'S NOT

by Noel Stockton

By the time you get to focus your orbs on this latest litany of Noel's Notes I shall have survived my sixty-fourth birthday.

I use the word survived with all due genetic respect, tempered with a modicum of apprehension naturally, that you might assume would be appropriate under the trying circumstances in which we exist today.

In this world we became destined to occupy it is indeed an achievement at attain those sixty-four years, what with the wars and pestilences and all those other inflammatory incidents that are programmed to bespoil our progress.

Actually I am quite grateful for the reprieve because I can still recall, almost in technicolor, the day my father died at the age of sixty. He was a very active man and belonged to a million and one clubs and organizations and never had a spare minute to spend at home.

One thing he didn't do though, he didn't curl, so there was an occasional night in the winter months that he did come home to eat.

Incidentally my dad never missed a day's work in his lifetime through illness, possibly because in those days they didn't stay home with a cold. Instead they used to take their sniffles to work with them regardless and carefully spread them around all over hell's half acre. But they didn't miss a day's work.

My father used to write with the unqualified expertise of the prolific scribe, both in verse and in prose, and he had a sense of humor that would have wrestled a smile out of Leonid Brezhnev himself.

He also made after dinner speeches that were totally unsurpassed in humor and in severity as the occasion demanded.

But when he had barely achieved his sixtieth birthday he suddenly died, expiring without warning, without so much as a whisper, and certainly without those customary words of wisdom that one would normally expect from one's pa on his deathbed, and it seemed to me at the time, for I was just eighteen, that the whole of me was buried with him.

Looking back to those days I can recall how I used to lie awake at night and I would pray with all the fervor I could muster that neither my mother nor my father would be whisked away from me and I was even insistent, in those prayers, that if God had any notions of taking any one of us, that He would be sure to call on me first, so that I wouldn't have to suffer the loss of either of my parents.

Well, He didn't, of course, and in future years I came to witness the sensibility of His choice, and at this stage of the game I must confess that I am truly grateful that He went about things in the sequence that He did.

It was many years afterward that my mother died. But not having lived with her since 1939, when I left to go to war, the blow was not quite so devastating. I felt a pang or two of regret that I hadn't seen more of her during her lifetime, and I wouldn't doubt that she, in her turn, would have preferred to have seen a little more of me and my family, for she was a kind, sensitive woman, and in our earlier days she expounded a vault of love in the cause of her five kids.

She had also gone to the trouble of giving birth to me, for which favor I have always been extremely grateful, although it must have been quite a traumatic experience for her at the best of times.

My mother lived to be eighty-six, bless her, and as far as I can remember I never heard a lousy word spoken about her, which is something of an endorsement in itself, considering the way in which our friends and relatives are wont to spread the manure about us all when we're not right there to hear it.

It might well be that somebody will splutter the odd syllable of some idyllic eulogy over me when the time comes, but even that is extremely doubtful.

I have never found the business of living to be a bed of roses, but I have always tried to attack my life with some sort of game plan, by being as helpful and friendly as the circumstances would stand, for after all it isn't possible to be the complete catalyst all the hours that God sends, and there are those occasions when misunderstandings rear their ugly heads and cause others to question our sincerity or our intentions.

Sometimes we find ourselves the victims of other people's jealousies and envies, quite unwittingly, and that's when we become the innocent butt of their recriminations.

But generally speaking, I believe I have managed to stagger through my allotted span without being the cause of too many inimical associations.

I have always known that life is a complex affair; by this I don't mean to imply that it is impossible to live it in a fair-minded manner. The complexity is all of our own making, in the diversity of the approaches that different people have towards it.

Where one man may sail gracefully through his sentence on this Earth with a casual, the-hell-with-you Jack attitude, another will be tempted to indulge in all manner of nefarious pursuits, simply because of his environment and his enforced associations.

People can so easily be a good or bad influence on our characters, and it isn't always possible to separate the one from the other at first glance.

It's easy enough for those of us who have weathered the storm and are now successfully emerging reasonably unscathed from the holocaust, to criticize the reactions of those less fortunate mortals who have fallen by the wayside. Unfortunately this is an all-too popular pastime that goes under the cloak of smugness and complacency, but I am personally forever mindful of the old adage that there, but for the grace of God, go I.

The many pitfalls we encounter in life's little curriculum are like a lion trap in the jungle. You never know it's there until the earth crumbles under your boots and you start to sink helplessly into the quicksand of a seemingly never-ending abyss.

Now I am sure you are wondering, if you have followed me to this stage, what has got into me, and I know you are pondering the parent, irrelevant incurn of my typewriter into profound recesses usu-reserved for the philosophical eggheads that do habit our sphere, instead the normally bright and every inclusion in these pages.

The truth is that I spent a wildered half hour last night listening to my color television screen expounding the day's news. The main news was compounded of four items. Two wars and two strikes.
And I wondered.
I wondered to myself, what in the name of God and of world have we created for ourselves.
Two wars and two strikes in the same bloody half hour.
Wars are horrific. Strikes are untenable.
And what I would dearly love to discover, if there is anybody in this wonderful world wise enough to alighten me, is this:
What the hell good can possibly be derived from two wars and two strikes. In two wars people are damaged, maimed, killed if they're lucky, and rendered homeless. People are also bereaved which is sometimes even worse.

In strikes people are forced to seek a cold charity and the families, who often enough have no love for strikes, and certainly no patience with them, are subjected to privations and often hunger.
And in the bitter end, in both wars and strikes, there is no winner.
Sometimes I find myself wondering what would have evolved in the natural advancement of our civilization if we had gone ahead and let the monkeys plot our courses for us.
Monkeys, you see, don't divorce their wives after being unfaithful to them.
They don't split the scene and leave their children to the mercy of the courts and strange, unfamiliar parents.
They don't spit on the sidewalk, blow smoke in other people's faces, and they don't inscribe dirty doggerel on newly painted washroom walls.
They don't use public toilets to seek clandestine rendezvous with other consenting males at midnight.
They don't drive cars the speed of light and they don't build battleships in their basements at two o'clock in the morning.

Now I may be wrong about this, but it's my understanding that monkeys never went to war. Nor do they shoot other animals into space for exploratory purposes, not knowing if they'll ever come down again, and I'm quite sure they don't go about bashing the brains out of baby seals with baseball bats.
And monkeys never go on strike.

Sometimes I feel we should have left the world in the capable hands of the Missing Link, if anybody could have located him anywhere, so that we could at least be sure there wouldn't be any more muggings and murders and violence and rape and theft and adultery and hate and envy, and jealousy and prejudice.

All of these qualities are the creation of mankind.
Monkeys would never have had the guile nor the greed to emulate them.
And just when I have the unadulterated nerve to imagine for one moment that civilization has finally successfully and painstakingly eliminated wars from its menu, they go and start up another flaming holocaust somewhere, just to keep our newsmen busy.

My chief concern is that one of these fine days some bloody encounter will flare up in some part of the globe and engulf the whole flaming lot of us again.
Well, I don't want that to happen, even though I have now successfully achieved my sixty-fourth year and I may be too old to take an active part in it.

But I have a son. And even now I can see my mother, with tears in her eyes, at the time of that last lunatic outbreak in 1939.
Thank God, she said then, that your father isn't alive to see all four of his sons go marching away to war.

So maybe it's a good thing my father died when he did...after all.
For he was essentially a peace-loving man, if there ever was one, and he abhorred violence in any shape or form, and it would have broken his heart.

In the same way it would break mine.
But don't you all worry about it. Next week I'll write something that has a little more humor in it.

At least I HOPE I WILL!

Witnesses meet

"The future looks grim yet people who conform to God's standards can rejoice." This was the contention of Wayne Johnson, district co-ordinator of Jehovah's Witnesses spoken to several hundred of the faithful at Napanee District Secondary School the weekend of May 30-31. "Nuclear weapons, famine, the energy crisis, all make thinking persons apprehensive of the future if they have no hope of divine intervention in the affairs of men," he continued, "but the Bible promises that God will 'bring to ruin those ruining the earth'
(Rev. 11:18) and usher in a 'new earth' (2 Pet. 3:13)
under the kingdom ruler-ship of Jesus Christ. This 'new earth' is a new system of things for humanity where the orderly God of the universe will eliminate war, famine, — even aging, sickness and death."

Johnson's talk titled Facing the Future with Faith and Courage was the climax of the two-day meeting of Jehovah's Witnesses in the Quinte area.

On Saturday the audience was counselled against becoming involved with many of the practices of modern society — comparing it to a modern Sodom and Gomorah. Bible counsel and its application was highlighted in skits and demonstrations.
Witness meetings at their local Kingdom Hall will resume this week.

Plans for large summer conventions at Woodbine, Race Track in Toronto and at the Olympic complex in Montreal are being completed, to serve English-speaking Witnesses in Ontario and Quebec.

Hastings Agrinotes Continued

use it on CJBQ Radio the following Monday noon. The first report of the season read as follows: "Present indications are that weevil populations this year will be similar to those of 1980. Thanks to the continued impact of natural enemies, infestations are again expected to be spotty, with damage restricted to a few localized areas.

Egg laying has now reached its peak and the main brood of larvae will hatch early this week. Traces of tip feeding can now be found and growers should be on the watch for

'hot spots' which can develop quickly in shallow soils or on southerly slopes. Previous problem fields should be checked regularly.

Growth of alfalfa is excellent and is running slightly ahead of schedule. Most fields in the area are already in the bud stage and can now be cut for maximum yield and protein."

Reconditioning Does Pay
Bruce D. Hodgins, Beef Specialist — Spring training is an essential part of the baseball season. It, along with training for other sports, and for professions, including farming, is really preconditioning. It is therefore not surprising that preconditioning should become part of preparing cattle for a change in their lifestyle such as weaning, being transferred to a new location or being put on a different feeding program.

Each change will usually require a different conditioning program but for cow-calf operators who sell their surplus young stock as calves or year olds it's a bigger job and probably more important than at any other time. Their program should include — early castration of all bull calves, dehorning, systemic treatment for warbles, vaccinations against blackleg, I.B.R. and parainfluenza and preweaned.

If you are selling heifers it would help if you could guarantee that none were in calf. Don't leave this to the imagination as we recently received a phone call advising us that a 15½-month-old heifer had just dropped a healthy calf so she must have been bred before she was weaned.

Last year 21 cow-calf men in Alberta formed the Ponoka Calf Preconditioning Society and held their first Preconditioned Calf Sale last fall. Calves from this sale that went to Ontario buyers and Alberta buyers were checked about one month after the sale and their health record compared to that of green calves and to calves that were immunized before sale but not pre-weaned. It was reported in the March 1981 issue of the Country Guide that there was very little difference in mortality among the calves that came to Ontario but the reduction in sickness in preconditioned calves was particularly noticeable, a fact which would make a considerable difference in feed efficiency and rate of gain.

Preconditioning of calves raised in Ontario should also reduce losses if these calves are stressed and if the facts are made known to buyers they will be willing to pay more for preconditioned calves.

When profit margins are small, producers must consider all the possibilities for increasing them and preconditioning is one of practical ways of doing just that.

Standard Farm Building Contracts Are Now Available Free of Charge —

During 1980 the OFA Properties Committee was directed to develop a standard farm building contract for use by Federation members. After meeting with the Canadian Farm Builders' Association and consulting with legal counsel, the committee completed the contract and forwarded it to the 1980 convention floor.

The contract is now ready for use and can be obtained by contacting your County Secretary: Mrs. Linda Farrell, RR 2, Roslin, Ontario K0K 2Y0 or OMAF Stirling. Please note this building contract was prepared as a guideline. Its purpose is to make owners aware what type of information might be included in a contract, and what items might be considered before building commences.

This form could be used as a contract. We stress that any users should consult with their lawyer to determine whether this particular form should be used for their particular construction

Did you know? that OFA has helped students get substantial loans. Last year, when the Ministry of Colleges and Universities made changes to the Students Awards Program, farm families were adversely affected. The OFA made several briefs to the Ministry, and succeeded in making the criteria for loans more favorable to farmers.

A Dramatic Demonstration

It's often assumed that people with mental or physical disabilities cannot participate in today's complex society.

As a symbolic gesture in this International Year, we've done something out of the ordinary: we've produced a television commercial just to set the record straight.

Consider this. Of the 68 people involved in our production, 42 are mentally or physically disabled; among them, the director, the cameraman, the set designer and the carpenters, the electrician, the make-up artist, the sound engineer, the announcer, many of the musicians and the man who wrote the music, who was deaf—but is better remembered for being Beethoven.

If you've seen the commercial, you've seen what happens when we work together. If you haven't seen it yet, it's a dramatic demonstration of a single simple point: disabled people should be thought of for what they can do, rather than what they can't. Our slogan, created by a man with a disability, sums it up and says it all: "label us able."

Memorial Society membership growing

The Funeral Planning and Memorial Society of Quinte held its general membership meeting on May 25. The meeting was attended by both Memorial Society members and the general public. Those present took decisions which will shape the direction of the Memorial Society for years to come.

The Memorial Society will proceed with its application for membership in the Memorial Society Association of Canada (MSAC). Once membership is attained, the Quinte Memorial Society will have reciprocal arrangements with more than a hundred memorial societies right across North America in order to assure that members' wishes are upheld concerning their funeral arrangements.

Memorial societies in general are consumer groups, non-sectarian and non-profit, dedicated to simplicity, dignity, and economy in funeral rites. Members of these societies believe that memorials which serve the living honor the dead much better than costly funerals. The cost of a lifetime membership in the Memorial Society (Quinte) will still be $7 for an individual and $12 for a family. The Memorial Society can be contacted at P.O. Box 477, Belleville (613-968-7640) for further information.

The Memorial Society will be proceeding to register as a charitable organization in order to receive donations for which a tax-exempt receipt can be issued. Also the society will be organizing monthly meetings which have as their focus the concerns of the membership and public rather than the business of running a rapidly growing non-profit organization. The members endorsed an Outreach Program which includes providing guest speakers for other organizations.

Madawaska Mines Ltd. have now withdrawn their consent for the AECB to deposit the waste from Scarborough on their tailings site but the fight doesn't seem to be over yet.

It also looks like the politicians are going to use this issue to enhance their chances in the next election. Photos and story on page 8. Photo by Ross Lees.

Big Fish Contest dominated by tourists

Again this year, the Moira Cottagers for Clean Water Big Fish Contest will take place with the largest muskie, walleye, bass and pike each winning trophies.

The rules for the contest remain the same as in previous years. 1) Fish must be caught during their respective open seasons and entered by 12 noon on Monday, October 12, 1981. 2) Fish must be caught by legal sporting methods. 3) Fish must be weighed and verified at Madoc Meat Market, Kincaid's IGA or Kramp's Variety. 4) Winners' names will be placed on permanent (sponsors') trophies, and winners will receive smaller "keepsake" trophies. 5) Decision of judges is final.

(largemouth or smallmouth) and Kramp's Variety sponsors the trophy for the largest pike.

Last year's results show Sam Douglas of North Simcoe, Ontario winning the trophy for the largest bass with a fish weighing 3 pounds, 10 ounces. The contest record is 4 pounds, 10 ounces set in 1979. The muskie trophy was won by Dennis Carlson of Stoneboro, Pennsylvania, with a fish weighing 55 lbs. even. The contest record for this category is 36 pounds, 2 ounces. The pike trophy was won by Murray Skinner with a fish weighing 8 pounds, 9 ounces, which is now the record for this first-time category in 1980. Mr. Skinner is from Pickering, Ontario. Ken Janiak, of Cleveland, Ohio, won the walleye trophy with a fish weighing 8 pounds, 13 ounces, also a new record surpassing the 1979 record of 8 pounds, 8 ounces.

Six Guides receive All Round Cords

On Tuesday, June 9, six Madoc Girl Guides received their All Round Cords. This award, the second highest in Canadian Guiding, was presented to Elaine Rodgers, Carrie Reid, Rita Hagerman, Kim Rollins, Jill Wiggins and Wendy Newland. These girls have spent approximately three years completing a series of challenges which provided them with opportunities to become responsible, resourceful and happy members of society.

They have spent many days and nights at camp and on outdoor activities; learning home safety and home-making skills; they examined their own community and studied the world and their place in it.

This evening was also the official culmination of the 1980-81 Guide program for Madoc. To mark this a mother and daughter banquet was held at St. John's Church Hall. The Guides did much of the preparation and decoration. The Hastings District Guide Commissioner, Mrs. Irene Newland, was present and assisted the unit Guides in presenting the awards at a candle-lit ceremony.

Centre Hastings Secondary School will attempt to run its own summer school, but the whole idea is subject to the amount of participation in the program.

"We're not trying to undercut what's already happening in Belleville," Frank Chapman, the vice-principal of the Madoc school told the Review, "but we feel our kids don't want to ride the bus to attend summer school in Belleville."

Another nice thing about the program being proposed for Centre Hastings is that the whole community can benefit from it. A remediation program for grades 5 to 8 will assist younger students in getting subjects they may have had trouble with during the year, there will be a language arts and mathematics program for both older students in high school and adults and there will also be sports programs consisting of volleyball, tennis and gymnastics.

Mathematics programs for grades 9 and 10 and grades 11 and 12 will make up part of the sessions while English for the same grades will complete each session. Math sessions last one and a half hours with English sessions taking a similar time. Adults are encouraged to participate in all programs and more information can be obtained by contacting the school. Regular school facilities will be used.

Sonia Hailstone was honored at the Madoc Public School on Friday after teaching French in that school for fourteen years. It was a premature retirement by choice but Mrs. Hailstone should be able to keep busy according to John Murphy, the principal of the school. Besides speaking French fluently, she speaks several other languages fluently, she has had several of her writings published in French in Europe and she will continue to write plus paint (she's also an accomplished artist) and she is an interpreter and translator. She is pictured above with fourteen students, one for each year she taught in the school, with her last class represented by Judy Tidale who is seated beside Mrs. Hailstone in the picture.

Poetry contest being run again this year

The Lester B. Pearson Peace Park is inviting poets to contribute a poem on any aspect of peace to the annual poetry contest held by the Peace Park.

There is no entry fee or cash award, but it is considered an honor to have the winning poem selected and read at the annual Peace Park Memorial Service on the third weekend of July of each year. A $25 honorarium is provided for travel expenses.

Previous winners have been: Charles Andrew Tupper, Foxboro; Betty Drev-niok, Combermere; Anna-belle Pallen, Renfrew; Nina Jarmin, Marlbank; George Seden, Toronto; Roberta Fisk, Roslin; and last year's winner was Joy Gough Mounghad, Ottawa.

The winning poem is usually published in the local newspapers. Entries should be sent to Roy Cadwell, Chairman, Lester B. Pearson Peace Park, Tweed, Ontario K0K 3J0.

Poems not accepted one year are kept for selection in subsequent years and are not returned.

Hastings District Guides, Brownies and Pathfinders meet

Seventy-nine Girl Guides, Brownies and Pathfinders from the Hastings District which consists of Marmora, Madoc and Tweed, gathered in Madoc at the O'Hara Mill site on Saturday to participate in a district-oriented social event. This first time ever get-together was very successful, according to Mrs. Irene Newland, the Commissioner of the Hastings

District. "In fact, it went so well that we finished at exactly 4 p.m., which is when we were supposed to finish."

"We found a few things that we will have to change next year, but for a first attempt, it couldn't have gone better. Even the weather was just perfect," Mrs. Newland said.

For most of the day, the girls were divided into three groups, one of which would hike and take part in a scavenger hunt, another would work on a craft and the third group would participate in various sporting events. At 3 p.m. all of the groups were brought together and each unit of the district introduced and led the remainder of the group in a song.

Sheila and Linda Frost, their shop, now called The Shielling, which means a little hut surrounded by flowers. They hope to make the shop known for unique gifts for special occasions.

Sears, flower shop get new owners and operators

If you have been into the Simpsons-Sears store in Madoc recently, you've noticed some new faces behind the counter. Sheila and Linda Frost. They are the new managers of the store plus the owners of The Shielling, the flower and gift shop that is replacing Delta's Floral Designs.

The Frost partnership in the Madoc store is new, but the Frosts have been in business in and around this area for quite some time. The Frosts moved from Scotland to Canada in 1966 and Mr. Frost went to work for Stanley Structures until 1973, when he took over the Tweed Gas and Dairy Bar. They took over the Chicken Bar in 1975 and also opened a children's wear store in Tweed. Now they have moved to Madoc to take over the operation formerly handled by Delta and Terry O'Hara which includes both the Simpsons-Sears Store and the flower and gift shop. And Madoc, Jan't exactly new to the junior of the two partners, because Linda went to school in Madoc.

The name The Shielling is Gaelic meaning "a little hut surrounded by flowers". The shop will include a wide variety of flowers but will not contain just flowers. Gifts will also be a part of the stock and Mrs. Frost's objective is to have unique gifts for special occasions. Right now, you can buy paintings, carvings, pottery and virtually all things dealing with flowers, but Mrs. Frost hopes to eventually increase the present stock.

"We owe a great deal of thanks to Delta and Terry for all their help over the past few weeks. They've just been marvelous and we really appreciate that," Mrs. Frost told The Review. "Business has been good so far and we hope it will get even better once we increase the stock."

Seniors get pension increases effective July, 1981

Vanhooknet, MP for Frontenac-Lennox and Addington has confirmed increases in the Old Age Security Pension, Guaranteed Income Supplement and Spouse's Allowance will come into effect in July, 1981.

Salvation Army thanks Red Cross field workers and contributors

The Salvation Army wishes to thank all who helped in the way to make the Red Cross Campaign in Centre North Hastings County successful.

Major Sandra Lewis, campaign director and commanding officer of the Red Cross of the Salvation Army, says the objective of $8,000 has been achieved and will be exceeded.

The commanding officer expresses special thanks to Mrs. June Way, residential chairperson in Tweed; Wes teed Income Supplement for an individual or a married person whose spouse is receiving neither a pension nor a Spouse's Allowance will increase to $215.72 from its current $209.03. Added to the basic pension, this will give a person receiving both the OAS and the maximum GIS a monthly total of $430.58.

The maximum Guaranteed Income Supplement for a married couple, both of whom are pensioners, will increase to $166.32 each from $161.16. Added to the basic pension this will give each married pensioner receiving the maximum GIS a total of $381.18, or $762.36 for the couple.

The Guaranteed Income Supplement is paid to pensioners whose income, apart from the Old Age Security pension, is limited. The amount of the supplement varies in relation to income.

The maximum Spouse's Allowance will increase to $381.18 from $369.36. The maximum Spouse's Allowance is made up of an amount equivalent to the basic Old Age Security pension and the maximum GIS at the married rate and it is paid to persons between 60 and 65 years of age who are married to OAS pensioners and meet residence requirements. Entitlement to a spouse's Allowance, and the amount paid, is based on yearly income.

Where the pensioner spouse dies, the surviving spouse may be eligible for the continuation of the allowance to age 65 or until remarriage if the person has no income or a limited amount of income.

Increases in Old Age Security pension and Guaranteed Income Supplement payments are calculated quarterly based on the cost of living.

Danfords celebrate 50 years of wedded bliss

On June 2, 1931, Gwen

Whorrall, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Whorrall of Bunkenhead, England became the bride of Sam Danford, son of Mrs. and Mrs. Joseph Danford of Madoc. The wedding took place in St. George Anglican Church, Trenton with Rev. Percy Heywood officiating. Mrs. Helen Kernohan was maid of honour and Hugh Kernohan was best man for the ceremony, 50 years ago.

To this happy union were born four sons: Brian, Douglas, Walter and Alan of Madoc and two daughters Marguerite (Mrs. Lloyd Rusaw) of Norwood and Ruth (Mrs. Gerald Austin) of Oakville. They also have 13 grandchildren and one great-grandchild.

The couple have spent their entire married life in Madoc, where Sam has been well known in the construction and trucking industry, supplying the needs of many Madoc families.

The festivities for their 50th anniversary celebration started with dinner at St. John's Anglican Church Hall on Friday evening May 29, 1981. Brothers, sisters, children and grandchildren as well as relatives and friends were in attendance. Bouquets of early summer flowers decorated the head table as well as the beautiful three-tiered anniversary cake, suitably decorated with touches of gold to mark the occasion. Guests at the head table with the bride and groom of 50 years were: Former MLA Clark Rollins and Mrs. Rollins; Bill Vankoughnet, MP for Hastings, Frontenac, Lennox and Addington; Rev. Paul Kompass, Pastor of St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc; Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Kernohan, best man and maid of honor respectively, 50 years ago; Cannon Jim Thompson, former rector of St. John's Anglican Church and Mr. and Mrs. Jim Pollock, MLA for Peterborough-Hastings. Cheryl Austin, granddaughter of the bride and groom was master of ceremonies for the evening. See Danfords on page 5 lighting everyone with the results of research on antiques of her grandparents. She also recalled that Danford's grandparents celebrated their 75th wedding anniversary when they were in their 90s.

Bill Vankoughnet presented the couple with a certificate, from himself, a certificate from his excellency Governor General Ed Sheppard; a letter from Opposition Leader Joe Clark and read a letter of congratulations from Prime Minister Pierre Trudeau with an apology for the late arrival of his certificate. Jim Locklock presented a plaque from Premier Bill Davis. Two cables of congratulations from Babington, Wirral, England were read as well as a letter of congratulations from Doug Parks, Clerk Treasurer of Madoc. Celebrations continued the next day with Sam and Gwen and family receiving relatives and friends at an Open House, held in St. John's Anglican Church Hall. The table was decorated with gold candles, flowers and anniversary cake. Approximately 200 friends, relatives and neighbours dropped in to express their good wishes. The ladies of the church were on hand to pour tea and serve the dainty lunch which had been prepared by the family.

Many beautiful gifts and flower arrangements were received, all of which will be cherished by them in the years to come.

Out-of-town guests were present from Liverpool, England; Vancouver, B.C.; Milton, Toronto, Oakville, Stouffville, Oshawa, Warsaw, Frankfurt, Campbellford, Springbrook and Amherstview.

Following the festivities the happy couple left with relatives for a five-day vacation, in New York State.

Strawberries OK

After several frosty starts this spring, Eastern Ontario strawberry growers are once again optimistic about the 1991 crop. The King blossom which produces the first large berry of the season was killed by a hard frost in mid-April. Three nights of frost in mid-May caused some further damage to the most advanced flower buds. However, if the weather co-operates for the rest of the season an average crop can be expected. Prices are expected to remain in the 60 cents per pound range. There will likely be some shortages early in the season since the earliest blooms of the earliest varieties were damaged. However, consumers should be aware that the strawberry season last from approximately mid-June to mid-July. The later blossoms of the early varieties and all blossoms of the later varieties suffered very little damage. Although the acreage was projected to be up slightly from last year, the crop will likely be similar to the 1990 crop in size due to winter damage and the frost damage to blossoms. The major varieties grown in Eastern Ontario, in order of ripening are: Vestar, Redcoat, Bounty and Sparkle. Each variety has its own distinctive color, taste and aroma. Consumers are urged to try some of each to compare them.

Dixie Lee Pee Wees on winning streak

The Marmora-Madoc Dixie Lee PeeWee softball team got through the week undefeated.

On June 9, they travelled to Tweed to notch a 19-8 win. Winning pitchers were Scott Chapman and Steve Meers. John Hanley got things off to a good start with a first-inning homer. In a tightly played game, the PeeWees nipped Stoco 9-8 on June 11. Peter Ringleman homered in the first, Steve Bancroft in the sixth and Steve Meers hit the tie-breaker to win the game.

The PeeWees will be in Madoc, June 18, against Springbrook.

It wasn't as easy as it sounds to spear a marshmallow piled on top of other marshmallows, but the game was fun and the race was close. This was the first time such an event had been held in the area but everything worked out well with the day's events ever ending on time.

Bancroft says,

BY JOHN BENNETT

This is a story that as yet does not have an ending. It has many of the elements of a fiercely-fought hockey series. The favored team comes from a big town. It has all the fancy equipment and support of big money. The home team on the other hand, is a thrown-together group of fighters who have nothing going for them except the will to win and the support of their community. The question is — Will the big money boys from the city beat the scrappy small-town team?

The captain of the home-town team is Jaci Winters, a diminutive woman in her thirties and mother of a teenage daughter. Her team is known as the Bancroft and District Action Committee. Their opponents usually go by their initials AECB. The Atomic Energy Control Board, which is headed by its president Jon Jennekins, a career bureaucrat in his forties.

They are not playing for the Stanley Cup. This game is about the dumping of radioactive soil at a mine site outside Bancroft. The soil comes from the Malvern subdivision in Scarborough. It got there during the Second World War.

The BDAC wants to keep the contaminated soil out of the area. They argue that a decision to use an area as a dumpsite for nuclear waste should not be done without full public participation. They argue that Bancroft, which is essentially a tourist area, could be destroyed if it became known as a nuclear dump. They say that even the publicity to date has caused cancellations.

The game started a few months ago when the Federal-Provincial Task Force on Radioactive Contamination decided on the advice of the AECB that the best solution to the Scarborough soil problem would be to find a permanent disposal site. So the suggestion was made to use the tailing ponds at the Madawaska uranium mine outside Bancroft. The chairman of the task force is Mr. Jennekins.

AECB: 1 — BDAC: no score
Once the decision was made, the AECB organized an information meeting, but they held it in Cardiff, a small community outside Hastings County. At that meeting a number of people became concerned about the implications of the dumping being imposed upon them. So they organized their own meeting the next week on May 21. They held it in the local high school and 150 people turned out. They elected their team, the BDAC, and told it to organize a larger meeting and to invite the AECB and all the government agencies involved to attend.

The response was so strong to the proposed

INTRODUCING A NEW SYSTEM FOR NEW DRIVERS. A SAFER WAY TO START.

Ontario introduced the Probationary Driver Licensing System June 1st, 1981, as a new highway safety measure. It's designed to help reduce the high percentage of traffic violations and accidents by new drivers.

Statistics show that in Ontario, new drivers, regardless of age, have accidents and break the traffic laws far more than experienced drivers.

The Probationary System is designed to make these drivers more aware of the traffic laws for everyone's safety. So, new drivers who ignore the laws, or drive carelessly during the two-year probationary period, will have their driver's licence suspended for 30 days when six demerit points have been accumulated.

A clean driving record is something to be proud of... but it's u. to y.u.

umping that shortly after the May 28 meeting, Madawaska Mines, in what Ms. Winters described as 'the act of a good corporate citizen' backed out of its agreement with the AECB. They were no longer willing to accept the Scarborough oil.

BDAC: 1 — AECB: 1
The AECB responded by saying that as a federal agency in charge of the nuclear industry it could overrule the local planning laws, municipalities and Madawaska Mines. In other words they were still going ahead with their plan.

BDAC: 1 AECB: 2
Next along came BDAC's star player, Larry Tadmán, a quiet man in his forties who lives with his wife and children near Bancroft. He makes his living as an insulation contractor. "I just wanted to do the same thing to the government as they are doing to us," he said. He walked to Toronto last week and attracted national media coverage when he attempted to leave a toy truck loaded with radioactive earth at Queen's Park.

He was met outside the front doors of the Legislature building by members of the protection service, who told him he couldn't dump anything there. "I told them I did not want to dump anything. I said I wished to make a delivery to the government. Then the next thing I knew a policeman told me I was under arrest. I asked him what I was charged with and he had to radio to headquarters and ask them. After twenty minutes, they said 'failing to leave when directed under the Trespass Act' but no one told me to leave." The Toronto police then cordoned off the area around the toy truck and called the bomb squad. An officer wearing a lead apron approached the truck with a geiger counter and when it showed radioactivity, the police pushed the crowd even further back and very carefully removed it.

One of the participants in last Thursday's public meeting said, "They want to send their garbage up here, but when one of us takes down a tiny bit of the stuff to them they throw him in jail. We should give them the same treatment."

Mr. Tadmán's stunt or protest was endorsed by the BDAC because they saw it as a way to get the word out to as many people as possible. They were delighted with the over-reaction of the Metro Police. What they hadn't really anticipated was how well the local people would respond to it. "Larry's arrest has really solidified our support in this community," said Ms. Winters.

Meanwhile Mr. Jennekins told the media that the protestors were a small minority, a subculture of radicals from outside and that AECB had received threats of violence in what Ms. Winters described as an attempt to divide the community to isolate the committee. However, it didn't work. Among the first to respond were the residents of the Chateau, the senior citizen complex. They told the local radio station that they would rent a bus and go out and block the trucks coming from Scarborough.

Then, last Thursday, the committee held a second public meeting in the elementary school gym. As they had been instructed at the previous meeting they invited a long list of politicians and agencies. Topping the list, of course, was the AECB, but the AECB refused to participate because it is not obliged to attend a meeting unless it is sponsored by an elected official or government. The BDAC had asked Bill Vankoughnet MP, Jim Pollock MPP, the Faraday Township Council and the Bancroft Village Council to sponsor the meeting so that the AECB would attend, but they all turned them down. So the meeting went ahead without the AECB but the Ontario Ministry of the Environment did come at the request of Mr. Pollock, who also attended.

Mr. Pollock faced more than 400 angry residents who peppered him with questions and demands that he stop the proposed dumping. Even former MPP Clark Rollins berated his fellow Tory for not doing enough to stop the dumping. Mr. Pollock repeated that he was opposed to the dumping but his promises to do "everything I can" did not impress the crowd. Local businessman Terry Pitts wanted to know what his game plan was but the

Bancroft says, "No!" to AECB

MPP, who has been in office for three months, had none.

Eventually, one man stood up and said, "I've been a Liberal all my life but I would consider voting for you if you would just do something to stop this dumping." Another said, "Won't you please just sponsor a meeting so that the AECB has to attend?"

"Well, I'd have to contact my lawyer and..."

"We don't want your lawyer. Are you going to sponsor the meeting?"

"I'll sponsor the meeting if..."

"Period."

"Period."

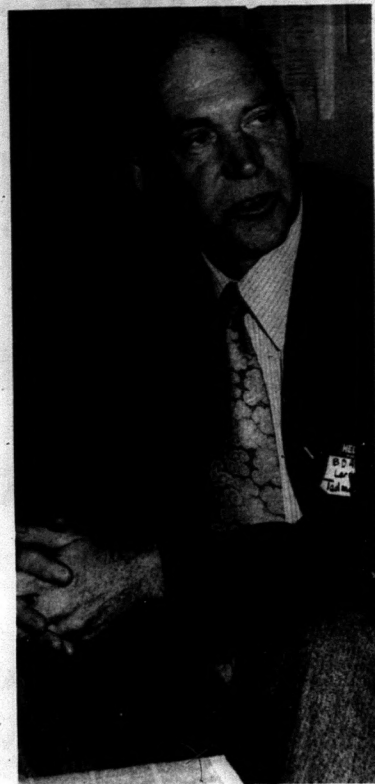

So there will be another meeting at which the AECB will be obliged to attend and explain their side of the story.

BDAC: 4 — AECB: 2

The meeting didn't stop there though. Mr. Tadman approached the mike to propose a motion. "I move that the Action Committee be empowered to use peaceful, and I stress peaceful, civil disobedience in the event that the trucks (from Scarborough) roll."

There was a hush in the meeting as the implication of the motion reached the members of the audience. A woman asked Mr. Tadman what he meant by civil disobedience. "I could give all kinds of answers but all I want to say is that if the trucks come here I don't want to get hurt or hurt anyone else, but I will stand in the way of those trucks." The audience applauded. Then the vote. It carried. A group of 400 ordinary working people had voted to break the law, if necessary, to protect their community.

So what it boils down to is a battle between the federal and provincial governments and a group of local people who now have the stated support of their MPP and their county council. The rest of us will learn from the battle just which is more powerful: the government bureaucracy or the will of a community.

Larry Tadman, so far is successful walk to Queen's Park last week.

last Tuesday night, the Minutemen downed the Madoc 6-3 and in Springbrook on Thursday night they shut out the Stealers 4-0.

After spotting Thomasburg a 3-0 lead in the top of the first inning the Minutemen scored a pair of runs during the bottom of the first and added three more in the second.

Lorie Kirkwood doubled in the first inning and Clayton Whiteman was hit by a pitched ball. Two errors by Thomasburg followed and the Minutemen had a pair of runs. During the second inning a double by Glen Graham and singles by Eric Bailey, Lorie Kirkwood, Clayton Whiteman and Brian Armstrong led to three runs scoring and a 5-3 lead for the Minutemen.

Madoc scored their sixth run in the sixth when Terry Helps drove in Ab Reid who had reached second base on an error by the centre fielder.

Thomasburg scored their three runs in the first inning on three singles and an error. (Two of the three runs were unearned.)

Brian Armstrong on the mound for the Minutemen gave up three runs on seven hits; he walked one and struck out nine. An oddity of the game was that Army was responsible in one way or another for twelve of the first thirteen outs. He struck out seven batters, threw out three batters at first and caught a pop-up and a line drive. The twelfth batter hit a ball out in front of the plate and the ball bounced back and hit his bat while he was out of the batter's box. (Not a bad night's work.)

In Springbrook against the Stealers, the Minutemen scored once in the first inning, added a single run in the sixth and a pair of runs in the seventh. During the first inning, Dave Fleming led off with a single; he was sacrificed to second by Kirkwood and driven in by a single by Ab Reid. In the sixth inning, Army singled, reached third on an infield single by Terry Helps and scored on a sacrifice fly ball by Robert Nicle. During the sixth, Harold Bailey singled. He was almost picked off first (fortunately the ball was thrown into right field). Charlie Wannamaker reached first on a strike-out and both scored on a single by Whiteman and a throwing error by the Stealers.

Brian Armstrong picked up his fourth win against one defeat. Army shut out the Stealers on three hits; he walked two and struck out seven.

This Tuesday night's game against Tweed brings the schedule to the half-way mark.

Softball Tournament at the ball park for the weekend of July 10-11-12 are under way. I'll have more on this later.

North Hastings gets $900,000 boost from governments

James Pollock, newly-elected member for Hastings-Peterborough, and Paul J. Yakabuski MPP, Renfrew South, jointly announce that the northern part of Hastings County and Renfrew County will be boosted by $900,000 provided by the governments of Ontario and Canada during the current year. It is part of the long-term program for improvement to both Crown Forests and private woodlots in Eastern Ontario through intensive regeneration, rehabilitation and ma-agement.

These funds are provided under the Eastern Ontario Development Program with the cost being shared equally by the Provincial Government through the Ministry of Treasury and Economics and the Federal Government through DREE. The work will be under the direction of personnel from the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources. Mr. Pollock and Mr. Yakabuski were notified directly by Alan Pope, Ontario Minister of Natural Resources and Pierre DeBain, Federal Minister responsible for DREE.

Of the close to the one million dollars, $500,000 has been allocated for work on 1,500 acres of forest in the two counties. It is also expected that about $200,000 will likely be recovered through the sale of timber to the forest-products industry, and disposition of fuel wood to private and commercial interests.

The new program is for a duration of five years and began in 1980. When it is completed more than 8,000 man-hours of local labor will have been used, contributing to the provision of much-needed jobs in both counties. The work consists of planting and seeding cutover lands which failed to regenerate naturally in a satisfactory manner. Unwanted species and poor-quality timber will be weeded out, pine plantations that are less than 20 years old are being cleaned, and young overstocked stands are being thinned out so that they will grow bigger and healthier more quickly.

The remaining $400,000 will be used to bring Peterson Road, in North Hastings County, up to municipal standards. The rebuilding of the Peterson Road was begun last year and is considered a forest-access road running from Maynooth to Benoit Lake near Harcourt. This road is important not only to the Martin Lumber operation at Harcourt but to many hundreds of workers in both counties who depend on the forest industry and that lumber company for a livelihood.

The improving of the Peterson Road will allow for heavy trucks to haul logs and deliver wood products by a more direct route, thus contributing to the efficiency of the entire woods and lumber manufacturing operation in that area. Local residents, cottagers and tourists will also benefit by the rebuilding of the Peterson Road which exposes and makes accessible some of the most beautiful country in all of Ontario.

Alcohol leads alternative fuels

The vehicle fleet need not be modified for gasohol. That might be the reason that fuel alcohol is now available in every corner of the United States. It is sold as gasohol, a blend of no lead gasoline and 10 per cent by volume of alcohol. While someday hydrogen motors, and electric cars may compete with alcohol fuels, today ethanol has attained supremacy.

Eighty-four manufacturers are offering fuel-alcohol production equipment to the farmers of North America. Another forty-one firms are building fuel alcohol factories. Several of these firms have four or more plants under construction. Gasohol has provided an immediate market for fuel alcohol. Straight alcohol can also be called on to perform well for lighting, heating and motive power on the farm. While portable lanterns, blow torches and small portable alcohol-powered heaters are likely to become popular when ethanol is an on-farm product, the value of straight ethanol as a transportation fuel is so great that this will become its primary function.

Conversion of existing gasoline engines to use straight alcohol can be done on several levels of sophistication. The most simple of these merely increases the size of fuel jets and adds an aid to vaporization. This simple primitive conversion needs a special device for cold starts and the engine will use one and a half times more fuel. By adopting fuel injection and high compression, these inconveniences can be overcome making ethanol an excellent fuel. The risk for the individual with a good knowledge of engines can be lowered by demonstrations and research and ultimately engine manufacturers may build alcohol motors.

Straight alcohol fuels are known to provide greater power, to be remarkably clean for our environment, to have superior storage properties and to reduce the fire hazard of fuel handling. The rate of fuel consumption in an alcohol engine can be as low as that of an equivalent gasoline engine.

800 beef bulls finish tests

May 15 marked the end of the spring test program as 800 beef bulls finished their test under the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food performance test program.

The testing program, says Brian Pogue of the ministry's livestock branch, gives producers an across-the-board comparison of the performance of different breeds and herds.

The ministry is concerned with improving beef cattle in Ontario," says Mr. Pogue. "We're working toward better breeding and an improved rate of gain. We want to improve the profitability of cattle. In the long run, improved cattle should mean a less expensive product for consumers."

About 400 Ontario producers submit a total of more than 1,000 bulls for testing annually at stations throughout the province.

The spring test is the largest one. It involves stations at Arkell (near Guelph), New Liskeard, Ridgetown, Harriston and various other facilities contracted to the ministry.

Bulls enter the test stations when they are six to seven months old. After a one-month adjustment period, they undergo a 140-day test period during which the rate of gain for each bull is measured.

The owners, says Mr. Pogue, pay 22 cents a day yardage charge and 45 cents per pound of gain during the test.

Animals at each station are indexed according to their average daily gain compared to the average daily gain of the other bulls at the station.

The 1980 Ontario Beef Cattle Performance Report, comparing all animals tested last year, will be available in June.

Mr. Pogue says the ministry tests any bulls nominated by producers. Farmers should reserve space at a testing station as soon as calves are born.

Producers can also test their bulls in private group tests on their own farms. Ministry personnel supervise these tests for the producer.

4-H Calf Club

The second meeting was held at the Madoc Township Public School. The Madoc 4-H Calf Club invited the Marmora 4-H Calf Club for a joint meeting. The meeting started at 8 p.m. with a couple of ball games. The pre-4-H calf club members and 12-15 year olds had a game and the over 15 years of age had one game. After the games were over we went into the school and opened our meeting with the 4-H pledge. The secretary from Madoc 4-H Calf Club read the minutes of the last meeting and took the roll call.

We decided the next meeting will be at Charlie

Wannamaker's farm on June 29 and we would have a veterinarian to talk to us.

Carol Murphy then spoke to us about our calves and how big they should be and how much they should weigh. She showed us charts on some farms and how much each heifer weighed and their height plus their feeding program.

The meeting was closed and lunch was served. Lunch was brought to the meeting by some of the members of the Madoc 4-H Calf Club.

Debbie Stiles thanked the Madoc Club for the invitation.

Stress can be healthy

Stress is a necessary condition of human life. A certain amount of stress keeps a driver alert, quick to react to dangers. It can make for an atmosphere of healthy competition in the office. It can prod a sportsman to keep improving his skills.

But stress can turn to distress. The driver sitting in rush-hour traffic, fretting about being late for a meeting, is experiencing harmful stress. So is the over-anxious executive who has not learned to relax. And so is the sportsman who is so obsessed with winning that he cannot enjoy his game.

The study of stress is not an exact science. What is known is that it is a normal, stimulating factor in human life, but that if it gets out of control it becomes harmful and destructive. It can lead to physical or mental breakdown. How to control the negative aspects of stress and use it to advantage is a skill that can be learned.

Lightness is secret of camper-trailers

By CASH MAHAFFY

Back in the 60s Wes Heath came to the conclusion that the only way a working man with a family could afford to go on a travelling holiday was to take his accommodation with him.

So, he designed and built himself a camper-trailer and he's been doing it ever since.

Wes was an employee of the Post Office in Peterborough, but only until 1971, when he set up a small camper manufacturing business on the outskirts of that city. There was himself, a partner named Dan and his wife, Thelma — hence the name Westdan Manufacturing Company Inc.

In the early days his campers were of the conventional size and weight. That is, big and heavy by his standards today.

"I could see a trend starting. Gas was going to get a lot costlier and cars were going to get a lot smaller. Those campers were going to be too big and too heavy."

In 1978 Wes moved his operation to a Highway 14 location exactly two miles south of Marmora's Four Corners.

He set about designing and building campers for today's cars and conditions.

What he came up with is a three-model line of camper-trailers that can be towed by the smallest of cars — even motorcycles. All are hardtops and all share the same 6'9" long, 5'6" wide and lightweight trailer box for manufacturing efficiency and economy.

Wes claims his heaviest trailer, at 405 lbs. gross weight, is less than half the weight of his closest competitor's. "And it's a lot smaller too, although it sleeps four very comfortably. We don't make them to sleep more than four, because the cars of today and tomorrow just seat four."

The camper-trailers require 30 pounds' pressure to pull them and exert 25-35 pounds downward pressure on the trailer hitch, which means they can easily be wheeled around by hand.

"When we started out we couldn't find a spring light enough for our rigs. We had to get one designed and made to our specifications."

Wes is proud of the Canadian content of his products. "Every component, every bit of material is made in Canada."

Westdan's six youthful, full-time employees now turn out one road-ready camper-trailer a day and there is an extra shift on the sewing operation.

"We hope to be in year-round operation soon," the owner-designer told The Herald. The company currently has sales outlets in Ottawa, Toronto, Stouffville, Trenton and Trent River and is adding more.

"We know we have trailers in or on their way to such places as Alaska, California and Mexico. Word will get around," Wes Heath predicts.

When set up, trailer will sleep four

ONE FOOT IN THE FURROW BY BOB TROTTER

Over 'ome accent irritates Bob

This country is called Canada. Not Canadian. We live — or try to live — within the law. Not the law. Those are just a couple of examples of what irritates me about some Britishers who come to this country and corrupt the language. Easy now. Don't get all steamed up and write me a dozen snarky letters. I am still proud of my British ancestry. My mother was born in Yorkshire. My maternal grandfather had some Welsh blood in him. My paternal grandparents came from Scotland and Ireland. I'm British which includes all of the four founding British nations.

But when an announcer on either television or radio adds that extra "r" to words which end with a vowel sound, I get irritated. Canadians can corrupt the mother tongue enough without any more help.

I suggested this to an English friend of mine the other day and he bristled like a badger. He said Canadians can't speak the language properly and we should admire those who can.

He is probably right but I still live in Canada, not Canada.

Being brought up in a background such as mine, I have some understanding of why the American colonies wanted independence. It was the pig-headedness of George III that drove them to it.

Which brings me to the main topic of this column: nuclear energy. I have been a proponent of nuclear hydro power in Canada for a decade. I believe it to be a sensible way to solve many energy problems.

This statement, too, will bring a flood of letters calling me everything but a sensible man. However, I stand by the statement.

A British physicist, Lord Bowden, recently wrote a letter to the Times of London in which he said that electricity in Britain went up by 30 per cent last year and will likely rise another 14 per cent this year. The Brits propose to build two advanced gas-cooled reactors which they have been working on for 20 years but which no one else will buy. They will cost 1,000-million pounds each and, says Lord Bowden, "we hope they will work better than the last lot."

The nuclear industries of the world, says the lord, publish tables to show what the world's great power plants are doing. Last year, the best was Canadian, the second-best was German, the next half-dozen were Canadian and the next was American. The best from Britain was rated 92nd on the list.

The Central Electricity Generating Board in Britain sold power at 2.14 pence per kilowatt-hour. But in Ontario, the Pickering power plant generated power for 0.45 English pence per kilowatt-hour.

Canadian nuclear power, said Lord Bowden, is the cheapest in the world and for a decade or more, their power stations have been the most reliable in the world.

Why can't we collaborate with the Canadians and use the best design in the world? Why must we be so perverse? asks Lord Bowden.

It is probably the same reason the American colonies revolted. It is probably the same reason my grandfather thought that everything ever done "over 'ome" was done a heck of a lot better than anything ever done in this country. He pooh-poohed anything and everything that was Canadian yet he lived here from the time he was 25 until he died at 88. He went "over 'ome" two or three times during his life but he always came back, even when he had enough time and money to stay over 'ome.

The Irishmen on the other side of the family loved their homeland but they did not dream of going back. They took a more realistic view. They did not want to go back and starve. It was a sentimental attachment for them, not real or attainable.

The next time I hear banana pronounced bananar, I'm going to throw up.

When I hear Canada pronounced Canadar, I feel like telling the speaker to take his bowling balls and go back over 'ome.

Wild foods need care

This is the time of year when my phone brings strange calls about the edibility of cattail roots or water lily leaves. But with the surge of interest in the edible wild, the dangers associated with some of the more common wild plants have also increased.

Beth Adams, writing in The Conservationist, notes that many wild plants are poisonous in some parts or under some conditions. The raw roots of skunk cabbage, for example, cause severe burning of the mouth and throat, but if they are well-cooked with several changes of water, an edible stew can result. The related jack-in-the-pulpit has the same properties, with its well-cooked version known as Indian turnip.

Poisonous fruits and berries can be particularly dangerous, since they often tempt those unfamiliar with wild plants. The berries of the blue cohosh, which resemble plump blueberries, are toxic enough to give a severe stomachache to a child. Baneberries, which come in both red and white versions, can produce cramps, dizziness, headache, and even circulatory failure after eating as few as six berries.

Most berries are safe, especially when fully ripe. But the common elderberry, which makes such mouth-watering pies when ripe, is poisonous when the berries are still green. Similarly, the fruit of the may-apple is poisonous when unripe, but edible when full matured. The roots of the may-apple are so poisonous that they were used by Indians as a method of honorable suicide.

For most of us, the gourmet delights of nature don't go much beyond the mouth-watering ecstasy of wild raspberry jam. If you are more adventurous, a healthy dose of caution, and one of the several excellent guides to edible wild plants, are all you need. But keep in mind the needs of the ecosystem too. Pick wild plants for eating only where they are abundant, and always leave a healthy colony to produce future crops. With care and restraint, exploring the edible wild can add to your appreciation of the diversity and beauty of nature.

Shriners take over

This will be Shrine Weekend in Belleville, with an expected 3,000 to 3,500 Shriners descending on the city from all parts of Central Ontario.

Highlight of the weekend as far as the public is concerned will be the mammoth, two-hour parade on Saturday, beginning at noon.

Proceeds from Shrine Club activities go to establishing and supporting hospitals for handicapped youngsters. Estimated total raised in North America last year was $55 million.

ALGAE are microscopic plants which are constantly being introduced into the pool water by rain, wind, dust storms, swim wear etc.

Algae reproduces more rapidly when water temperatures are higher, pools are in greater use and there are long days of direct sunlight.

Antiques in Picton spotlight marks the seventh time that the Ladies' Club of the Prince Edward Curling Club will sponsor an Antique Show. Since white has become a favorite color for the club's exhibitions in Eastern Ontario, the show will be held at the Curling Club on Wednesday, June 17 and Thursday, June 18 from 11 a.m. to 9 p.m. Tickets sold in advance through club members are $1 and door admission is $1.25.

Twenty-three registered dealers, located along the Toronto-Montreal corridor, will display choice antiques and collectibles in every category. One can choose unusual items in jewelry from another century, antique silver with early Canadian, American or European hallmarks, glassware of crystal, pressed, art-form or other types, and china showings which make one's choice interesting. The Picton show is well recognized for the broad selection of old and beautiful furniture pieces, wall decorations and unusual items in pine, walnut, mahogany, butternut and maple.

Quite aside from the exhibition itself, the Ladies of the Curling Club have established an enviable reputation through the years. A delicious luncheon with varied menu, featuring a dessert table of homemade pies and cakes is available both days of the show at $3.50 per plate. Tea is served from 2:30 to 4 p.m. each day in a restful setting on the main exhibition floor at 75 cents. Reservations are not required.

You are invited to join the thousand or more visitors who come each year to enjoy this large antique collection and to talk with the knowledgeable dealers who bring their finest pieces and their expertise to interest you. Browsing along provides its own fun and finding that piece you have always looked for can be very satisfying. According to financial experts, antique investment in the 1980s can be an effective "inflation hedge" for the uncertain future.

Prince Edward Curling Club will heartily welcome its visitors to this annual event whether one is antique hunting or seeking a happy day away from everyday surroundings. Regrettably, for obvious reasons, children under 12 are not allowed into the display area during the antique show.

UHT milk handy

Milk, nature's most nearly perfect food, is a perishable product. If you're camping, boating or if refrigeration at the cottage is limited, it can be difficult to keep milk safely cold. Food and nutrition specialists with the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food suggest UHT or sterilized milk might help.

UHT stands for "ultra high temperature". While pasteurization requires a temperature of 74°C for 15 seconds, UHT milk is heated to a minimum of 135°C (about 275°F) for at least two seconds. This sterilizes it, killing any disease or spoilage microorganisms. As a result, UHT milk can be stored at room temperature until it's opened. Its freshness is guaranteed for three months after packaging, so check the "best before" date on the top of the carton. Once the airtight seal is broken, treat it like any other fluid milk. Keep it cold!

While the cost and nutritional value of UHT milk are close to pasteurized two per cent, the flavor is not quite the same. The high temperature used gives it a slightly cooked, richer taste. The difference would hardly be detected in hot beverages, cooking or on cereals, but when used for cold drinks, it might be a little more noticeable. Chilling it thoroughly before serving. You could also flavor it with pureed fruit.

which may be beyond the control of the producer. Nevertheless, for the system to work, production must be controlled. Dairy producers are required to market at least 85 per cent of their MSQ available for the year, while they must market at least 80 per cent of their Group 1 Pool allotment during the dairy year. With the 1980-81 dairy year ending July 31, now is the time to start planning for increased production or possibly a reduction if production is over the quota allotment. A listing of the quota available and production to date for April indicates that there are quite a number of producers who may have difficulty filling their quota allotment this year. Each producer receives a print-out indicating his production to date and the quota available each month with his milk cheque.

Big pig show

A dollar saved may be a dollar gained, and visitors to the eighth annual Ontario Pork Congress in Stratford can find out how to save that dollar at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food exhibit at the Stratford Coliseum, June 23 to June 25.

says Max Kurp of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Emphasizing feed efficiency, he says, is part of an ongoing ministry effort to help farmers operate as efficiently as possible in all areas of production. Last year the ministry's exhibit concentrated on improvement of efficiency through disease control.

The emphasis of this year's exhibit is improvement of feed efficiency to save money.

"We're always stressing efficiency," says Paul Simmons, co-ordinator of the exhibit, "and feed is the most costly item in producing pork. There are many ways we can save on feed in the face of rising costs and falling returns."

Producers can ask ministry veterinarians, agricultural engineers and swine specialists about their specific operations and receive expert advice on feeding, management, and disease problems.

"We want to make pork producers more aware of the ministry services available to the pork industry,"

The exhibit is one of more than 200 exhibits at the show which attracted 10,000 people last year. It is the largest show of its kind in Canada, and second in North America to the American Pork Congress.

The show consists of a breeder day, a feeder day and a market day, and includes a competition for producer hog equipment innovations, purebred swine shows and sales, barbecues, educator programs and the third annual pig art contest.

The Ontario Pork Congress opens at 9 a.m. each morning and admission is $2 per person.

COUNTRY GOURMET

BY IAN CAMPBELL

MOTHER'S German Restaurant, Black River Road, Near Madoc, [613] 478-2131

Few local restaurants enjoy a popularity to equal that of MOTHER'S and a recent visit proved that popularity to be deserved. The large dining-room is bright with a pleasantly rustic view and the tables are well-spaced to allow privacy.

The menu lists eleven German main courses including two schnitzels, ham, pork cordon bleu, goulash, bratwurst, braised beef (rinderbraten) and stuffed pork roll (schweine braten).

Grilled pork hocks included the single largest hock I have encountered, tastily cooked, with sauerkraut, potatoes and vegetables.

Roulade, which is rolled steak filled with bacon, herbs and spices was equally delicious and accompanied by tasty dumplings and a different sauerkraut.

Prices for the main course are reasonable and range from $5.95 for the ham to $9.95 for zigeuner schnitzel and cordon bleu.

A black forest cake was unusually good and equally so a mocha cake. Service is pleasant, helpful and relatively unobtrusive.

While the dinners provided are excellent, there is an interesting and very reasonably-priced luncheon menu, and since part of the delight of MOTHER'S is the trip through the countryside, at least once it might be worthwhile to visit for lunch and enjoy the drive.

The winelist is not enormous, but MOTHER'S offers an unusually good Austrian white house wine which is well worth ordering. The price for two should be well below $40.00.

Quilts on show

The Ontario Agricultural Museum near Milton is hosting the Canada Packers Quilt Collection, June 15 to July 22.

The collection, featuring 10 handmade quilts, was initiated in 1976 to recognize this traditional and continuing Canadian craft.

"The 10 quilts in the exhibition represent both traditional and modern quilting patterns," says Cindy Rennie, of the agricultural museum. "This collection offers a chance to look into our past and also recognize the growing interest in this craft."

Eight quilts, purchased across Ontario and Eastern Canada, form the base of the collection. Each year a new quilt is added to the collection through the annual Canada Packers Quilt competition, held in cooperation with the Ontario Association of Agricultural Societies.

There are 15 quilts now in the collection, with the latest addition designed and quilted by Doris Waddell of Bath, Ontario. It was selected as Grand Champion from more than 6000 quilts entered at local fairs last year.

As a special highlight of the quilt exhibition, the museum is sponsoring a lecture about quilts in Canada, featuring Patricia Harris of the Royal Ontario Museum. "The free lecture is being held July 5 at 2:30 p.m."

Visitors to the Ontario Agricultural Museum can tour the quilt exhibition in the W.A. Stewart Hall located in the main administrative building, from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m. daily.

Freezing techniques

For only a few weeks in June each year, we can enjoy fresh Ontario strawberries. Marketing specialists at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food suggest you stretch those few weeks into months by freezing a winter's supply of Ontario strawberries.

Choose the freshest, ripest berries and freeze as soon as possible after purchase. Berries should be plump and have a solid-red color. Just before freezing, gently wash the berries in cold water, pat dry and hull. Strawberries may be frozen with or without sugar.

When you plan to serve frozen strawberries as fresh berries, it is recommended to freeze them with sugar. The sugar helps to preserve the texture and fresh flavor of the berries. For quartered and sliced berries, combine every 4 cups strawberries with 1/4 cup sugar. For whole berries, combine every 4 cups berries with 1/2 cup sugar.

Strawberries can also be frozen without sugar, but the texture and color are not as well preserved. These unsweetened frozen strawberries are recommended for use in jam, sauce and baked goods.

Another alternative is crushed strawberries. They are ideal to freeze without sugar because texture retention is not as important as with whole or sliced berries.

Volunteer Corn a Potential Problem — Volunteer corn may be a problem for farmers this year. Excessive rainfall, warm temperatures and an unusual abundance of corn borer moths and larvae made harvesting difficult last year. As a result, whole ears of corn and individual seeds were left on the ground in many fields, says Rudy Brown of the Ridgeway College of Agricultural Technology near Chatham. This may result in volunteer corn popping up early in this crop year. Farmers can eliminate unwanted corn in non-corn crops by using either Hoe-grass or Roundup. Hoe-grass is a post-emergence grass herbicide applied at the one-to-four-leaf stage of annual grasses and volunteer corn for best control. It can be used on soybeans, white beans, kidney beans, lima beans, snap beans, barley, carrots and onions. Roundup is registered as a spot treatment but RCAT is experimenting with roller and wick applicators. This application method controls corn and other weeds growing above shorter crops, such as beans and many vegetable crops, without hurting the crop. Roller applicators require a 10 per cent Roundup-water solution. Wick applicators require a 33 per cent Roundup-water solution.

"In a corn crop, volunteer corn can be difficult to control," says Mr. Brown. "It is hard to cultivate out and, because its growing point is below the soil until the corn is knee high, it grows back when the top of the plant is cut off." In non-corn crops, volunteer corn can be easily controlled if it is caught early. If it is allowed to grow past its early stages, it is difficult to control and can present problems for farmers at harvest time.

The Three Es of Safety — The three Es — engineering, education and enforcement — are the main ingredients of any farm safety program. Manufacturers are responsible for engineering safety into the products they sell; farmers must know how to operate this equipment safely. It is the farm employer's responsibility to educate all help in safe working procedures and to enforce safety rules on the farm.

Ureaplasma. Dr. Clare Craig, Stirling — A number of farmers are now hearing about a "new disease" which is causing repeat breeders and early abortions. They may have heard from their neighbors or veterinarians that it is called ureaplasma or mycoplasma.

The organism that is causing the problem is officially labelled a ureaplasma. It belongs to a group of organisms called mycoplasma. Mycoplasma are something between bacteria and a virus. Bacteria can be treated with antibiotics such as penicillin. Viruses can be controlled by vaccines and your own body wards it off in 5-6 days. However, mycoplasmas respond very poorly to antibiotics and only certain types. The body does not get rid of mycoplasmas very quickly and no vaccine works effectively. As a result mycoplasma cause a number of diseases that are hard to control and treat.

The ureaplasma that is causing all the problems right now for the cattleman infect the reproductive tract of the cow and bull. In cows it lives in the vagina and produces an inflammation which the farmer notices as red blisters in the vagina or a purulent discharge on the tail. The infection can last up to a year in a pregnant cow and cause no problem. The problem arises when the cow is bred and the organism is carried into the cow's uterus by the breeding rod. Once in the uterus the organism kills the embryo causing the cow to abort. This may occur within as little as a week so the cow comes back into heat on her three weeks or as long as three to four months.

In natural breedings the chance for abortion is less but the continuous exposure of the bull to ureaplasma will eventually result in the bull becoming sterile. Ureaplasma may be spread in a number of ways. It may be introduced into a herd through an infected cow being brought in, an infected bull being brought in and through the use of infected semen. Once the infection is in the herd, an infected cow can spread it to cows around her. Studies have indicated the infection rate is higher in the winter when the cows are stabled than in the summer. The disease will gradually spread through the entire herd with some cows getting over it quicker than others. Some cows may be infected by the use of infected semen. The disease will probably continue for several years with the heifers being affected each year.

Treatment and control is limited to post breeding infusions and the use of a double rod at the time of breeding. Tetracyclines will help eliminate ureaplasma from the uterus if infused the day after the cow is bred. They will not totally eliminate the infection from the vagina so that reinfection into the uterus is a problem. The AI units are trying to control the spread at the time of breeding by the use of an extra sleeve that inserts into the vagina and allows the breeding rod to pass cleanly into the uterus. It is awkward for a technician to use and not 100 per cent effective. Efforts are being made to treat semen with antibiotics to eliminate ureaplasma but problems with semen kill have resulted.

Rhubarb parfait

Here's a recipe that was featured in our Parties to Feature Your Farm Food Forum. It's a nice light finish to a heavy company meal. Use the Rhubarb fresh from the garden. Heavenly Rhubarb Parfait (6 servings)

170 g (2-3 oz pkgs) strawberry flavored jelly powder
500 ml boiling water
125 ml cold water
500 ml vanilla ice cream (softened)
500 ml rhubarb
125 ml sugar

1. Dissolve one package jelly in 250 ml boiling water. Beat in softened vanilla ice cream. Half-fill parfait glasses with jelly. Chill.

2. In saucepan, over medium heat, simmer together the rhubarb and sugar. (Add water, if using fresh rhubarb.) Simmer, covered 10 minutes until rhubarb is very tender.

3. Dissolve remaining package of jelly in 250 ml boiling water. Add cold water. Freeze until slightly thickened — about 15 minutes.

4. Fold rhubarb into thickened jelly. Spoon over set mixture in parfait glasses. Chill 30 minutes. Garnish with dollop of whipped cream.

Forage sampling a reliable guide

Sampling forages as they come off the field ensures farmers of accurate nutrient analysis.

"It is very important for dairy farmers to get a good handle on the nutrient content of their forages, particularly protein content and the minor elements such as calcium and phosphorus," says Steve Dolson, co-ordinator of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food feed advisory service.

"Getting a representative sample is the key to obtaining accurate feed analysis. If you wait until the end of the silo filling procedure, you may or may not get a sample that is representative of the field."

Keep a plastic garbage bag on hand when unloading the haylage. For every three or four wagon loads, put a handful of hay into the plastic bag, then tie the bag to prevent the material from drying out. At the end of the day, take a sample from the bag, put it in a smaller bag and store it in the freezer.

Continue the sampling procedure until all haying is complete. When you have all the hay in, mix all of the daily samples together and take one sample for analysis. Sampling kits are available from local agricultural offices. The ministry's feed advisory service offers three types of feed analysis to help farmers formulate balanced dairy rations. Type one, for $7, is a basic test measuring dry matter and crude protein. Type two, includes the basic test and provides greater detail, the amount of calcium, magnesium, potassium and phosphorus, for a cost of $15. Type three combines type one and type two analysis with tests for trace elements — manganese, copper and zinc, at a cost of $16. Producers can have forages tested for digestible protein for an additional $8 with any of the three types of analysis.

"Since minerals are important in dairy cattle

nutrition, we recommend type two or type three tests," says Mr. Dolson. "Type three is useful when there is a health problem in the herd, and we aren't sure whether or not it is feed oriented."

Tests results are returned to the farmer after two to three weeks. A copy of the analysis is also sent to the local agricultural representative so farmers can contact the local office if there are any questions.

Mr. Dolson recommends that farmers sample first, second and possibly third cuts of hay. Protein and other nutrients may differ greatly because there are fewer grasses after the first cut.

Tests tell tale in feed problems

Feed problems don't happen every day, but when they do, knowing where to go for help can save time and money.

"There are two organizations to turn to when you notice feed problems," says Garnet Norrish, swine specialist for the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food live stock branch. "Deciding which one can help depends on the type of feed in question."

Registered feeds, identified by a registration number on the feed tag, are regulated by the federal government through Agriculture Canada.

"Farmers who notice a decrease in production, in the form of feed refusal, reduced productivity, or sick or dead animals and suspect feed as the cause, should contact local offices of Agriculture Canada's food production and inspection services," says Mr. Norrish.

"If you can't find the nearest office, contact your local Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food Office," he says. "Staff will redirect your call to Agriculture Canada, or have the proper official contact you."

All other types of feed, including custom feeds produced at the mill or on the farm, and individual feeds such as corn, barley, haylage, potatoes or bakery waste, are non-registered feeds. Any problems concerning these feeds should be directed to local offices of the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Staff at local ministry offices help decide which types of tests are necessary to determine the cause of the problem. However, farmers may send samples directly to the ministry laboratories.

"There are two basic types of tests conducted by the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food," explains Mr. Norrish. "One type tests for toxins such as mycotoxins and pesticides, the other tests the nutrient content of the feed."

Toxin tests are conducted through the veterinary services laboratories located in six locations in the province. Detailed information about the tests and sampling procedures is given in the veterinary services laboratories Factsheet number 400-688, available from the information branch, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food, Legislative Buildings, Toronto, Ontario, M7A 1A5.

LAMBDA ST. W., PETERBOROUGH, ONTARIO

Dear Jean-Luc

Hees protests rail change

Since the beginning of June, Via Rail no longer offers direct rail service to Ottawa from the small communities between Toronto and Kingston. Formerly, commuters could board a train Sunday evening and ride directly to the capital. Under the new system, they must change trains at Kingston, which includes a twenty-minute wait for the train to Ottawa. One of the regular passengers on the Sunday train to Ottawa is long-time Northumberland MP George Hees. Not surprisingly he is upset by the new rail schedule. Below is his description of the trip to Ottawa, which he has sent to the Minister of Transport Jean-Luc Pepin.

At Kingston, it was necessary for all passengers going to Brockville, Smiths Falls and Ottawa, to change trains. Included in this group were several women with small children and numerous pieces of luggage.

We got off Train 56, and waited for a scheduled 23 minutes in a small waiting room, in which there were only 5 seats. The alternative to waiting in this very much overcrowded room was to carry baggage and children down one flight of stairs, through a tunnel, and up another flight of stairs to the main waiting room. When our next train arrived, the reverse procedure was necessary to get back to the correct platform.

Now, what did all this inconvenience and delay accomplish for the people travelling direct from Toronto to Ottawa, and for whom many direct air flights are available every day?

Before the change of schedule took place, Train 46 left Toronto for Ottawa and all intermediate points, at 4:30 p.m., and arrived in Ottawa at 10:15 p.m. — for an elapsed time of 5 hours and 45 minutes. Under the new schedule Train 46, which does not now stop at Oshawa, Cobourg and Belleville, leaves Toronto at 5:10 p.m. and arrives in Ottawa at 10:45 p.m., for an elapsed time of 5 hours and 35 minutes — a saving of 10 minutes!

As I mentioned earlier, when Train 46 stopped at Oshawa, Cobourg and Belleville, it left Cobourg at 5:45 p.m. and arrived in Ottawa at 10:15 p.m. — for an elapsed time of 4 hours and 30 minutes.

The new train, 56 which is the only one, now available to the people living in the towns and cities between Oshawa and Belleville, leaves Cobourg at 5:49 p.m. and arrives in Ottawa at 10:45 p.m. for an elapsed time of 4 hours and 56 minutes, having required an additional 26 minutes to make the trip!

And so we see that to save Toronto passengers 10 MINUTES on their trip to Ottawa, those getting on the only train now available to them, at intermediate points, requires 26 minutes more for the trip than the original train used to take, PLUS a very inconvenient change of train.

Via Rail claims that they are doing these things to improve rail service. The comments I heard in the small crowded waiting room at Kingston were that Via Rail is doing what the CPR did some years ago — trying to get rid of their passenger service by letting their service deteriorate.

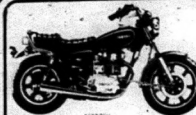

For people living in Oshawa, Bowmanville, Port Hope, Cobourg, Colborne, Brighton, Trenton and Belleville, the bus and automobile are alternative ways of travel, and will be used more and more as train service deteriorates. We are trying to save gasoline and encourage people to use the train. I firmly believe that the way to do this is to improve rail service, not let it deteriorate.

Why should the citizens of Oshawa, Cobourg, and Belleville and the towns near them which use these stations — Bowmanville, Port Hope, Colborne, Brighton and Trenton — suddenly become second class citizens? What is so great about people in Toronto and Kingston that they deserve a good service to Ottawa, with no slow-down and no transfer of train, while the others are relegated to a slower and more inconvenient service?

I would appreciate hearing from you when you have had an opportunity to look into this matter, and I very much hope that it will be possible to correct this situation of a down-graded train service for the people who live in towns and cities between Toronto and Kingston, and who would like to make the journey by train to Ottawa without an additional half-hour of running time, and a very inconvenient change of train.

Yours sincerely,
Hon. George Hees, MP

Liberals to meet

An estimated 600-700
Ontario Liberals will take a good, hard look at their Party's future next week when they gather in Kingston, Ontario, for their annual meeting. The theme of the June 19-21 convention at Queen's University is Priorities for Progress.

Party officials say that most rank-and-file members believe that the traditional support base of the party must continue to broaden in the wake of the recent provincial election. The Liberals maintained their 34-seat standing in the Legislature on March 19, and found some new support in urban and predominantly ethnic areas. But some party members feel that other potentially-Liberal areas were overlooked by the campaign.

Chemicals found asthma cause

The medical profession is finding alarming evidence that chemicals in the work place cause asthma, says a leading authority on respiratory diseases.

Dr. Geoffrey Davies, head of the respiratory diseases unit at Sunnybrook Medical Centre, told delegates to a York-Toronto Lung Association's seminar on asthma that more than 200 chemicals have already been identified as causing asthma.

"With the increasing number of chemicals being used industrially, we're becoming more and more aware that chemicals released into the air at work or maybe into the environment may induce asthma in people who were not previously asthmatic," he said in an interview.

"It worries us a great deal because there is a type of adult asthma (over 40 years) we've never fully understood. And we are finding too, rather than our horror, that in many of these patients, the disease has been caused by ex-posure to chemicals."
It is estimated that 2.6 per cent of Canadians suffer from asthma, a respiratory condition resulting from restricted airways in the lungs, and that less than 1 per cent die from it annually.

In 1979 the Workmen's Compensation Board approved 69 claims for time lost from work as a result of asthma and chronic bronchitis. In 1977, 39 claims were approved.

Davies said it is estimated that 15 per cent of new asthma cases in adults in highly industrialized Japan can be traced to chemicals.

"How frequent it is in Canada we're not sure," he said. "But I must say the more one sees of it the more alarmed one becomes."

Davies said we're living in a "chemical soup" and that very little can be done about the situation.

"This particular adult onset type of asthma is becoming more frequent.
And we're beginning to fear that much of it may be caused by chemicals."

The medical profession must state the problem, identify and quantify it "and then it can be approached like many of the other problems we're aware of" such as acid rain, he said.

Township Fun Fair organized to perfection, support was great

The Madoc Township Public School Fun Fair held on Friday night was a tremendous success as more than $1,200 was raised for the purchase of gymnasium, music and library equipment at the school.

It was easy to see that a great deal of work had gone into the night of entertainment and competition and it must have been heartening for the organizers to see their efforts supported to such a degree by the community. So many people paid their 25 cents to get through the door that, after you got through the first door, you had trouble getting through all subsequent doors. The halls, each room and even the gymnasium were always at least partly full of people going one way or the other to get to the next event, game or display.

While it was hard to pick the most popular attraction of the evening, we had to go with what was billed as a "comical magic show". Comical it certainly was and the word magic may never have the same meaning again for those who witnessed the display on Friday night. Joanne Lake was the magician and an admirable job she did. Her helper, who shall go nameless, was an integral part of the show but her introduction to the audience stole most of the show until the magician disappeared from the stage and reappeared at the back of the auditorium. Wow! THAT was magic.

Another popular event was the cakewalk. No matter where you were in the school, someone always seemed to be headed for the cakewalk and, later in the evening, many people were walking around with cakes they had won.

Whoever planned the evening deserves a great deal of credit for thinking of something for everyone. There was an auction sale, games, a plant, book and bake sale, a fish pond, raffles, refreshments, door prizes, clowns and, to top it all off, there was also free babysitting. The evening probably couldn't have been better organized or better supported.

It's hard to tell in this picture if Joanne Lake's helper is crying or laughing, and that's the way it was when it actually happened too. At first it looked like she was laughing, but after a while, it looked like she was crying. This all happened because she couldn't get out of the hole in the table that was necessary to make this trick work. C'est la vie!

Cooper Homecoming Weekend upholds Cooper's reputation

If you ever need an event organized, you should try to have at least one person from Cooper on your organizing committee. Whenever Cooper decided to hold an event, whatever it may be, it always turns out to be even more successful than anyone ever hoped and that was the case for the Cooper Homecoming held this past weekend.

The weekend was kicked off with one of Cooper's now famous talent shows and this particular show may have been the surprise of the weekend. As usual, Gary Smith was in charge of the show and he seems to be able to pull talent out of the woodwork whenever he wants. Much of the talent that went on the stage was local, very good, but not well known in this area. They should be after the show they put on at the arena on Saturday.

Sure, the old standbys were there too, like Ralph Underhill, Jean Bailey and the like, but there was some interesting new talent that will be hard pressed to remain unnoticed from now on. The band Thurlow was a very pleasant surprise as everyone felt they belonged on a professional circuit instead of playing at the Cooper Homecoming, but no one complained. Howard Trewin was another surprise, again very pleasant. This man looked too comfortable on the stage and seemed to enjoy the music and the atmosphere too much to have been a first-time performer. And what a voice!

There were many more acts, as fourteen different acts filled the time from

2:30 p.m. to almost 6 p.m. when the show had to be See Homecoming page 2

Anglican parish annual picnic

On June 14, the parish of St. John the Baptist, Madoc, held its third annual Outdoor Service and Parish Picnic. The event was held at O'Hara's Mill Conservation Park which was a perfect setting for the theme of the service - God's Creation. Music during the service was provided by some of the musical members of the parish family. Rev. Paul Kompass and Mrs. Pat Hastings played violins along with Robert Alysforth on clarinet, Bruce Allan on trumpet and Wendy Hudson on flute.

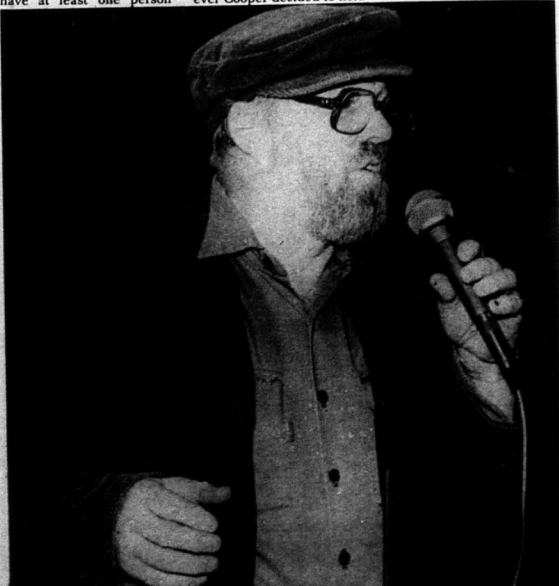

During the service, Sunday School awards for attendance and Bible verse memorization were presented by the rector and the Sunday School Superintendent, Eleanor Bruce. Those who received awards for Excellent Attendance were: Philip, Stephen and Michael Kompass, Warren and Byron Miller, Carrie Bonter, Matthew, Vicki and Ann Graham, Stephanie and Laura Traviss, Kevin and Scott Gillespie, Robbie and Barbie Bruce, Sarah Parks, Vicki, Jeff, Karen, Jill and Dawn Wiggins, Terry Hudson, Clark and Siobhan Harrop, Jeff Sawkins, Matt, Rose, Siobhan Harrop, Barbie and Robbie Bruce and Stephanie Traviss.

Those who received trophies for Bible verses were: Warren and Byron Miller, Michael Kompass, Matthew Graham, Kevin and Scott Gillespie, Vicki, Jeff, Karen, Jill and Dawn Wiggins, Jeff Sawkins, Matthew Rose, Siobhan Harrop, Barbie and Robbie Bruce and Stephanie Traviss.

A special presentation was made to Dawn Wiggins who faithfully provided the music for the Sunday School during the year and to Wendy Hudson who is leaving the teaching staff this year after two years of See Anglican page 2

The offices of The Review will be closed Wednesday, July 1, Dominion [Canada] Day.

There were a lot of very good performers at the Cooper Homecoming Talent

Show on Saturday but everyone was impressed with Howard Trewin's songs and antics.

They traded a barn for a store, and never looked back

Jessie and Don Smith: A department store in their barn

Who would expect to find a department store in the rolling farmland between Marmora and Stirling?

It's there, and it's called Don's Discount Bargain Barn.

Proprietor Don Smith was a dairy farmer milking about 45 head of Holsteins until December 13, 1978. "Then the barn burned down, and I quit," Don recalls.

Actually he didn't quite. He rebuilt the barn, intending to get back into dairying. Then he got to thinking. Now he and his wife Jessie are storekeepers and the new barn is their store.

In the barn is everything you'd expect to find in a well-stocked grocery store, plus toys, furniture, hardware, footwear, sporting goods, automotive products, clothing, books and Jessie's handmade silk flowers and arrangements, which are proving popular for weddings.

The barn has been open almost exactly one year and "business is showing a healthy rate of growth," says Don.

"I'm working a lot harder now than I did when I was farming," he said. "But I'm enjoying it."

Don goes on a weekly buying trip to Toronto and four times a week to Belleville to pick up perishables. He buys all locally grown produce in season.

"We've served free coffee ever since we opened, and we'll keep it up." Also, Don is going to try Saturday night consignment auctions to attract people to his location.

"We've built up a good list of regular customers from Marmora, Tweed, Madoc, Stirling, Havelock and the area, especially during the summer," Don says.

So far, farming is the farthest thing from the Smiths' minds.

Homecoming Weekend

stopped so people could eat. Gary Smith tells us they still had people waiting to go on the stage. And all of this talent responded to letters circulated earlier asking people to return for the Homecoming and asking for volunteers for the talent show.

The Hart Brothers, plus Murphy's Orchestra rounded out the evening along with a couple of very good meals, but that wasn't the end of the Homecoming.

On Sunday, everyone started to gather at the Community Centre for the Gospel Hour featuring the Switzers from Gilmour and Ed Martin. That was quickly followed with a pot luck dinner and, if that wasn't enough, everyone headed for the ball park for some more visiting and some athletic competition to wear off the big meal. While the adults and older children played ball, the younger kids were entertained with games of their own with prizes distributed after.

All in all, it was a very enjoyable weekend, with even the weatherman producing when he needed to. The response was very good from out of town and, when it was asked if they wanted to have another homecoming, the response was unanimous. Now, it only needs to be decided whether it will be held next year or whether it will be held every second or third year.

The Second Annual Country Music Jamboree at Lingham Lake Lodge this past weekend was not well attended and therefore was a distinct disappointment to the organizers. Approximately 300 people attended the day of country music, a very distinct drop from the previous year.

But while attendance was down, everything else went according to plan. The music was very good and was supplied by the Cummings Boys, Catfish Willie and the Mystic Knights of the Sea and Reg Weber and the Country Classics. At least part of the poor attendance was attributed to the fact that several Belleville residents commented that they had nearly refrained from coming because of rain in their area prior to leaving. They felt many other people may have decided to stay home because of that fact.

While it did sprinkle off and on throughout the day, the weather at Lingham Lake Lodge was basically pleasant and, as the day progressed, the skies cleared and the sun began to shine. The atmosphere was relaxed, music continued almost non-stop and those who did attend seemed to have a good time.

"Sure we're disappointed with the crowd," Wayne Kennedy told The Review, "but we're happy that those who did come seem to be having a good time. There has been absolutely no trouble, everything has been very relaxed and our only problem has been that the people didn't show up."

Catfish Willie and the Mystic Knights of the Sea weren't exactly playing to a sea of faces on Saturday at Lingham Lake Lodge, but the band still tried to do their best for the 300 spectators who were there.

United Church Women, Unit One

The Unit 1, United Church Women held their meeting June 17 at 2 o'clock at the home of Mrs. Irene Gordon. There were 12 Ladies present answering the roll with a bible verse naming a bird. The meeting led by Mrs. Viola Wannamaker was opened with the hymn Dear Lord and Father of Mankind followed by the Purpose and the 117 Psalm. A poem on Fathers Day and Summer was read followed by prayer.

Mrs. Ruby Brady had charge of five worship hymns. Faith of our Fathers, followed by a reading of Katherin Koobs 444 day Rap with Jesus, written about the hostages of whom she was one and Mrs. Sadie Holmes read My Will and Friendship Pays. Mrs. Rev. Adams read Have you seen the Mountains. Mrs. Ruby Brady read Fathers are Wonderful People. Mrs. Sadie Holmes acted as secretary in the absence of Mrs. Lou Parks. The meeting closed with the Mirpah Benediction. Lunch was served by Keitha Parks and Lottie Bailey. A social half hour was enjoyed by all. This was the last meeting until September.

A scoffer becomes a believer

By C.S. Baldwin
I came to scoff and I came to pray." So goes old saying that could I sum up my thoughts the faith we should have the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Foods (OM-

AF) soil testing program.
This program is administered through the Department of Land Resource Science, University of Guelph. It is the most reliable method of finding out what the available soil nutrient levels are and how much need be added in barnyard manure and/or commercial fertilizer to grow our crops and maximize profits.

Each year, many counties, through the Soil and Crop Improvement Associations, test the validity of the soil analysis and fertilizer recommendations. Almost without exception, they find that following the

OMAF report gives excellent results and, above all, maximum profits.

The more aware farmers are of how chemical nutrients act in soil, the greater their appreciation of the OMAF soil test.

Some farmers are still concerned that less fertilizer phosphorus (P) and potassium (K) are recommended now than 10 years ago. This is entirely possible since many farmers have been very generous in supplying these two nutrients to their soils. Crops haven't removed the P and K from the soil as fast as they have been applied. Consequently, many soil tests are coming back indicating that the soil nutrient level is high, even excessive. It's very much like a bank account. If you continuously deposit more than you withdraw, the account builds up. Therefore, on many of our soils the fertilizer recommendations for P and K are low or even nil.

Much field research work here in Ontario has proven that the crops just do not respond to added fertilizer when the soil test does not show a need. It makes no sense to have a gas-bar attendant try to add another few gallons of fuel when the gauge indicates that the tank is full to the brim.
Should it be any different with the P and K in our soils?

An increasing number of farmers are showing enough faith in the OMAF soil testing program to believe in and closely follow the recommendations. The dramatic increase in input costs is having an effect here. Many farmers have conducted comparison studies on their own fields. "Come harvest time I could see no difference in yield and used a lot less added fertilizer," just like the test called for is the oft-heard comment.

Soils are basically a mass of chemical elements. These elements are continuously being released as available nutrients. The soil test then is an analysis of these available nutrients from natural processes, and from what is left over from manure and fertilizer that has been added and not used by crops or lost from the soils.

Some believe that because the soil analysis service is free the farmers pay little attention to the recommended rates of fertilizer application. The direct cost to the farmer for the soil analysis service has nothing whatsoever to do with its value in calculating the soil nutrient levels and in the value of the recommended fertilizer requirements.

A little known feature of the OMAF soil test program is the safety factor that is built into most recommendations. Fertilizer rates are recommended at soil test levels above those where crop response is usually profitable. This is done to maintain nutrient levels in the soil as well as to allow for some error in field sampling.

In the OMAF test, nitrogen recommendations are based on such factors as the kind and amount of manures to be applied and on the presence of legumes in the rotation.

The OMAF soil testing program has developed from and been correlated with an extensive field research program throughout the province. It is an extremely reliable way to assess the available nutrient status of P and K and limestone in the soil.

People say "How can we grow crops and maximize profits without P and K?"
The answer is simply that you cannot. But this does not mean that we must continually and indiscrimi-nately add nutrients to the soil. If the soil levels are low then manures and fertilizers need to be added. The higher the soil test levels, the less is needed. If you have an adequate soil supply, more is not needed until crops remove what is there, and the soil analysis reflects this removal.

Good soil management and crop production start with soil sampling and analysis. The samples should be taken to represent the land area in question.
The fertilizer recommendation will then reflect what is needed to supplement the available soil nutrients. The ministry provides an excellent, reliable soil test program. Applying fertilizer and limestone according to

Liberals blasted for "bargain" oil prices

Canadians are being forced to pay world prices for their oil which is to the detriment of Canada rather than its benefits.

Most of that money is not going west as it should but directly into the pockets of audi Arabians, Venezuelans, Mexicans and others from whom Canada buys increased quantities of foreign oil. In turn we get imported inflation, economic uncertainty and greater and greater dependence on unstable foreign supplies of energy. What a bargain!

This government was returned to power on a promise to kill the Tories proposed tax of 18 cents a gallon on gasoline, not heating fuel or diesel fuel.

The price of gas at the pump has easily increased twice that much and the Liberals now say they meant only 1980 it would be lower.
Since the Liberals were returned to power, gasoline prices have increased by as much as 60 cents a gallon: prices are about 50 per cent higher than they were just seventeen months ago.

The Liberals' promise of a made-in-Canada price has become a made-in-Canada joke.

Increasingly the price of oil is being set by forces beyond Canadian control as billions of dollars flow out of the country needlessly, all because the federal government refuses to pay a fair domestic price and share revenue with our producing provinces. At this point we can consider ourselves fortunate because of the oversupply of oil on the world market has kept oil prices down on the world market with few interruptions.

It just does make sense to pay Mexico $60 a barrel while the federal government pays $17.75 a barrel for Canadian oil. One certainly does not need a college or university background to see this ridiculous and unfair intimidation being used by the federal government.

Museumobile to visit O'Hara's

The Royal Ontario Muse-mumobile is currently touring Ontario with its display of fossils of Ontario. On July 10th, it will be travelling to O'Hara Mill to make a one-day stop. The hours of operation will be 10 a.m. to noon — 1 p.m. to 5 p.m.
These artifacts have been made available to residents all over Ontario.

This exhibit will give people of Ontario a chance to become more familiar with its past. Fossils of Ontario taken you through 2,000 million years of the history of life. A record of plants and animals which lives in these past ages is now preserved in sedimentary rock.

The ROM museumobile is a part of the Ontario Outreach Program (Ministry of Culture and Recreation) Since many cannot make it to the museum in Toronto, Outreach brings it to you. This will be the first time that it will be stopping at O'Hara Mill.

O'Hara Mill Conservation Area is a day picnic spot, that is owned by the Moira

River Conservation Authority. At this historical site one can roam around the land that was once owned by the O'Haras. All of the buildings have been restored and some are more than 130 years old. O'Hara Mill is located a few miles north of Madoc on Highway 7 west.

Energy-efficient driving starts at the car lot

You probably know that proper driving habits and vehicle care can stretch a few more kilometres from a tank of gasoline.

But even careful driving

MRCA seeks public input

The Moira River Conservation Authority's Planning department is awaiting suggestions from the general public concerning the Price, Vanderwater and Quinte Conservation Areas master development plans. The planners, Greg Callaghan and Alan Parkinson, are presently producing the master plans for these areas. They are hoping the watershed residents can give them some valuable input.

Many residents are unaware that there is a place to go with their ideas. This will give the public a direct line to the planning department to voice their concerns.

Public participation is a vital tool and one of the key aspects of the planning department. The suggestions will aid in determining better development of the above areas.

The planners also welcome suggestions for other conservation areas in the MRCA besides the ones that are listed above.

and maintenance won't ease the pain at the gas pumps if you own a gas guzzler.

So, if you are in the market for a new car, think about the cost of gasoline — both now and in the future.

Then, before you begin shopping, make sure you know what you want. Don't let a salesman talk you into energy-inefficient extras
you don't really need.

First of all, buy the lightest car possible for your needs. Remember that weight is one of the most important factors in determining fuel economy.

Once you've found a car that will carry all the kids but won't empty your pocketbook, think about engine size.

If you plan to tow a trailer across Ontario this summer, you may need an eight-cylinder engine. But a V-8 uses 15 to 20 per cent more fuel than a V-6. If at all possible, stick with the smaller size. A four-cylinder engine is even better.

Consider buying a car with a diesel engine. Diesel engines are substantially more energy efficient, last longer and usually require less maintenance than gasoline-powered engines. In addition diesel fuel uses less energy to refine than gasoline.

If you've chosen a smaller car, a four-speed manual transmission can bring you almost 10 per cent better fuel efficiency, if driven properly, than an automatic.

But if you choose an automatic transmission because you find it easier to drive, pick the one with the highest number of ranges
— this is the most economical. In addition, an overdrive option, which reduces engine speed while maintaining the same highway speed, will save both fuel and engine wear.

Now how about options?
Here are some tips to decide which ones are worthwhile.

•Power Steering
This option is reasonable for full-sized cars, but is usually not necessary for smaller cars. The extra weight and engine power required cost energy.

•Tires
Radial tires, while slightly more expensive initially, last much longer and increase both fuel efficiency and handling abilities.

•Air Conditioning
This option can increase fuel consumption by as much as five per cent during highway driving and even more in the city. Devices are sometimes available which cut off the air conditioning when passing, thus saving some fuel and increasing the power available for passing.

•Cruise Control
This device helps to maintain a steady speed, which increases fuel efficiency on long highway trips.

•Fuel Flow Meters
These devices indicate

Eldorado diamond being prepared for busy future

Plans for the township diamond are progressing very favorably with a group of men working on the field all day Saturday to level up the new playing field. Present plans for this ball field are to provide an area for all township residents to participate in the game of softball. At completion, the diamond will have two playing surfaces, one diamond to have lights, a canteen and a picnic area. As stated last week we have 12 teams playing at this field but, although the minor league are well represented, we have no teams for girls to play in under age of 16 years. We also know of three more teams that are preparing for entry into the men's and ladies' league next season. So the importance of the work on this new diamond is very evident. Support the township members in this worthwhile endeavor. Let's meet some of the gang, starting with the Eldorado Lakers. These are the lads from 8 and 9 year olds. This team will soon have new sweaters sponsored by Doug Lake Grads of Bannockburn; hence the name Eldorado Lakers. This team is coached by Cyril Shaw, who has been involved in coaching minor ball for 10 years. Cyril coached an all-Ontario championship team in 1974. These boys are playing in a home-and-home season with Springbrook at present but are looking for more competition from local areas. Although not winning at present, the boys are learning the fundamentals of softball and, are improving by the week. Team members are Robbie Lake, Marty Shaw, Shawn Wood, Dale Sager, Michael Hoflyzer, Shaun Chapman, Jason Bailey, Barclay Sexsmith, Ian Ketcheson, Blai Sarginson, Joe Wood and Troy Trotter. So you see all corners of the township are well represented.

Cyril is also coaching the Eldorado Cheese Midget-Juvenile team who are currently playing in the Tweed Hungerford Men's League.

See you next week with more news from the township.

fuel economy on an instantaneous basis and on a cumulative basis (for a trip), so they can be used to help you adjust your driving habits to be more fuel efficient.

*Block Heater

This is a useful option in cold weather because it allows you to start with a semi-warm engine. But use a timer to turn it on an hour or two before you go, don't leave it on all night.

*Sun Roof

Whenever it's open, a sun roof increases wind resistance, reducing fuel economy.

These are just examples of the range of choices. You can also buy gadgets to start your car during a cold night, to control windows and to adjust seats. But keep in mind that all of them cost money, many waste fuel and most are not necessary.

OPP REPORT

During the week of June 14 to June 20, officers of the Madoc Detachment investigated 65 general occurrences and 11 traffic accidents resulting in $9310 property damage and injuries to four persons.

Fourteen persons were charged with liquor violations.

On Wednesday, June 17, a 14' cedar strip canoe was found wedged in the Marmora Dam and removed. Owner may claim canoe by contacting our Madoc office. Constable W.E. Sawkins is investigating.

On Saturday, June 13, at approximately 10 p.m., Robert Wilkins, age 41, of RR 1, Havelock, was driving his farm tractor northbound on County Road about 6 kilometers north of Marmora. Wilkins, while attempting to light a cigarette, drove his tractor into the east ditch where it rolled over, pinning him underneath by his right arm and leg for approximately three hours. William Fluke of RR 4, Marmora noted the lights of the tractor in the ditch as he was driving north and after stopping, heard a person calling for help. Assistance was requested from the Fire Department and our office. Wilkins was removed and taken to Belleville General Hospital by City Ambulance and admitted. Damage to the tractor was $200. Constable J.W. Ball is investigating.

On Sunday, June 14, at 5:30 p.m. Robert Sandbach, age 18, of RR 2, Norwood, was driving a 1966 Ford Van east on a Madoc Township Road near County Road 12, and upon entering a right curve he lost control of the vehicle.

The van entered the south ditch and struck a rock causing $1000 damage to the right front corner. Sandbach and a passenger Edward Ash, age 15, of Madoc, were taken to Belleville General Hospital with minor injuries. Sandbach was charged with careless driving by investigating officer, Constable J.R. Eadie.

On Thursday, June 18, at 11:30 p.m., an accident occurred on the Rawdon Township Road, between lots 6 and 7. Marvin Reid, age 39, of RR 1, Stirling, was driving a 1970 Case farm tractor southbound pulling a cultivator, followed by Gloria Reid, age 37, of Stirling, driving a 1973 Ford pickup. A third vehicle driven by Laurie Chapman, age 16, of RR 1, Stirling, was westbound over a hill and collided with the farm tractor and then the pickup.

Damage to the Chapman vehicle was $2000. Damage to the pickup was $800 and $100 to the cultivator. Constable D.J. Travis is investigating.

On Saturday, June 20, at 8:25 p.m., Karen Whiteman, age 18, of RR 3, Madoc, was driving a 79 Ford northbound on County Road 12 at the Cooper Store. Tommy Keene, age 21, of RR 5, Madoc, was attempting to cross the intersection eastbound driving a 77 GMC pickup and was struck by the Whiteman vehicle. Damage was $1200 to the front of the Whiteman vehicle and $600 to the right front of the Keene vehicle. Keene was charged with failure to yield by investigating officer Constable R. Bruce.

On Saturday, June 20, at 7:45 a.m., two vehicles collided on a Hungerford Twp. Rd. between Concession 9 and 10. Ronald Turcotte, age 21, of 51 Fraser Drive, Batawa, was driving a 77 Plymouth eastbound and collided with a westbound 74 Plymouth driven by Peter Roos, Yarker. Turcotte's vehicle had $1000 and there was $300 damage to the Roos vehicle. Turcotte was charged with failure to yield. Investigating officer was W.H. Haggerty.

On Saturday, June 20, at 9 p.m., a one-vehicle accident occurred on the Madoc Twp. Rd., between Concession 10 and 11 north of Cooper. Robert James Blakely, RR 3, Havelock, was driving a 74 Chev pickup which left the roadway, entered the east ditch, striking some rocks and a fence. Damage was $800 to the vehicle and $500 to a fence owned by Joe Stire of RR 3, Madoc, Ontario. Blakely was charged with careless driving by Constable R. Bruce, investigating officer.

On Saturday, June 20, at 11:10 p.m., Douglas G. Mawer, age 17, of RR 5, Arden, was southbound on Highway 57 at County Road 8 when a deer crossed in front of his vehicle. The deer was struck and killed. Damage to Mawer's vehicle was $800 to the left front. Constable J.R. Eadie investigated.

wet, others are dry; some behaviors bring a smile to mum's face, some make her frown; some things taste good, but other things taste better; shoes come off but eyes and ears are there to stay! As the supply of facts grows, so does her awareness and understanding of the rules by which the world around her operates. This process, by which the infant symbolizes and categorizes in her thoughts, objects and events that exist in the physical environment, is referred to as cognitive development.

The first major step in making "sense" out of her surroundings is achieved when the infant realizes that objects exist even when she cannot see them. The baby who will lift a blanket to find a hidden toy is demonstrating the concept of 'object permanence'. She has learned that although the toy is temporarily out of sight, it still exists. This knowledge leads the infant to explore the relationships between objects and space. In her play, the infant will experiment with objects of different sizes, weights, and shapes and discover what happens when you bang them, stack them, fit one inside another, take them apart, drop them, etc.

Initially, the infant will explore objects in a somewhat random fashion — she may wave it, pull it, chew it, roll it, drop it. She is as interested in the action itself as she is in the effect produced. Gradually however, with experience the infant begins to discover that certain actions produce certain effects while other actions produce very different effects. Eventually the infant develops a set of rules outlining what means must be used to achieve a certain end and can select the most appropriate action to produce the desired result. Here you are seeing the first signs of problem solving. At this stage babies will persist for long periods of time to find solutions for difficult problems. Water holds a particular fascination and the bath tub and toilet bowl often become favorite laboratories for lengthy problem solving sessions!

A parent can best promote cognitive development by permitting an infant to explore at her own pace and in her own way. "Baby-proofing" the home will make this exploration safer and more enjoyable for both parent and child. (This involves anticipating and removing or avoiding objects and situations that threaten baby's safety). When exploration must take place in a more restricted environment, supplying new and challenging objects and providing demonstrations of ways to explore items while encouraging baby to imitate you can help expand problem solving skills. Sometimes it is helpful to rotate baby's supply of toys: by putting some toys away for a while and then returning them, an opportunity for baby to rediscover them is provided.

This is the last weekly column dealing with the development of children from birth to five years. Issues relevant to this age group such as toilet training, teething, walking, talking, toys and learning to read will be discussed. Any questions you have about your child's development are welcome. Address your comments to: Midweek, Box 250, Marmora, Ont., K0K 2M0.

I wonder how she did that?

As you can see from this picture, many of the children weren't expecting to see real magic on Friday night, but look at their faces when Joanne Lake disappeared from the stage to reappear at the back of the gymnasium.

Are trees the answer to the oil crisis in Ontario

If you can't drill for oil, grow it.

It all started when the Ontario Ministry of Natural Resources began planting fields of hybrid poplars to use as fast-growing pulpwood which could be harvested like an agricultural crop.

But research showed these same poplars could be turned into methanol or wood pellets or some other form of renewable energy. It's almost like an oil farm.

an oil plantation.

The poplars will grow in areas of the province not used for agriculture now — especially in poor and wet soil. Within two years they grow to 10 feet, large enough to use as an energy crop. And after they are harvested, new trees grow out of the old stumps.

By 1995, plantations of the fast-growing hybrid poplars in Ontario could be producing the equivalent of six million barrels of crude oil — enough to heat more than 300,000 homes for a year.

Ontario Energy Minister Robert Welch points out that producing synthetic fuels from biomass — including hybrid poplars or wood waste — is a major part of his ministry's five-year, $75 million alternative transportation fuel program.

By 1995, about 15 million barrels of oil equivalent (BOE), or two per cent of Ontario's total energy requirement, will come from: — forest (mill) residue — 0.9 million BOE or enough to heat more than 50,000 homes a year;

— forest (bush) residue — 8.4 million BOE or enough to heat more than 420,000 homes a year; — biomass energy plantations — 5.9 million BOE or enough to heat more than 300,000 homes a year.

To meet these targets, the Ministry of Energy is promoting a variety of projects.

Turning wood waste into energy solves two problems — waste management and energy production. Northern mills which have had to pay to get rid of wood waste now are using it to produce the energy they need — or even selling it to local industries.

For instance: — The Shell-Canada Woodex plant at Hearst is using wood waste to produce 100,000 tons of wood pellets a year to fuel the Abitibi Paper Co. Ltd. pulp and paper mill at Iroquois Falls;

— With help from the Ministry of Energy, the Levesque Plywood Ltd. mill at Hearst is using a new wood gasification technology which will convert 30,000 tons of wood waste a year into energy;

— The Monteith Correctional Institute near Timmins is evaluating the potential of heating its gymnasium, and eventually the entire facility, by burning wood. Other institutions are watching this work closely.

The Ministry of Energy is also working with the Canadian Wood Energy Institute to provide background information for a new publication on home heating with wood.

And the first phase of a four-part wood energy study recently showed that Eastern Ontario alone could provide more than a million dry tons of wood and wood waste each year to turn into energy.

Going back to wood heat is a return to an old, but reliable, energy source. Since Ontario has lots of wood, it only makes sense to improve techniques which will allow many industries and homeowners to replace expensive imported crude oil with more secure supplies of homegrown wood.

Cottage cheese popular Canadian food

Cottage cheese is a favorite food in Ontario. And it's no wonder when you consider the many varieties of cottage cheese available, say marketing specialists at the Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food.

Ontario cottage cheese is made from pasteurized skim milk or fortified skim milk powder. It is easily digested and has a milk, slightly acidic flavor. Cottage cheese is an unripened fresh.

There are many different types of cottage cheese available. Choose from salted or unsalted, dry or creamed cottage cheese. The curds may be large or small. Cottage cheese is also available plain, or flavored with onion, fruit pieces, vegetable pieces, or a variety of seasonings.

When shopping for cottage cheese, look for the "Best Before" date as a storage guide. Keep it covered in the refrigerator for up to one week. For best flavor, plan to use it within three days. Freezing cottage cheese is not recommended; however, it may be frozen as an ingredient of a dish such as lasagna or baked cheesecake.

Nutritious cottage cheese is delightful both fresh and baked. It is probably best known as the dieters' delight when teamed with crispy vegetables or juicy fruits. Make a tasty dip by mixing cottage cheese with dried soup or salad mixes, or with your own seasonings. Baked in a casserole or main dish, cottage cheese lends a creamy richness as well as being a satisfactory source of protein. For desserts, cottage cheese is often a key ingredient of the ever-popular cheesecake.

and worked for the G.B. Airhart Lumber Company for four years. In 1940 he was appointed Chief of Police for the Village of Marmora succeeding Major Percy Gray. In addition, Bill was also appointed as County Constable for the County of Hastings. He was initially a member of the Kawartha Police Association and when the Quinte Police Association was formed in Belleville, he

Rent controls unaffected

Ontario's rent control legislation remains unaffected by a recent Supreme Court of Canada decision which declared certain provisions of Ontario's Residential Tenancies Act unconstitutional.

Phillip Williams, chairman of the Residential Tenancy Commission, said the Supreme Court's decision on May 28 affects only the non-rent control provisions of Ontario's Residential Tenancies Act.

"It's important for landlords and tenants in Ontario to realize that this decision does not nullify the rent control portion of The Residential Tenancies Act, or the status of the Commission as the agency which administers rent control," Williams said.

Under the rent control provisions of the Act, landlords are limited to one rent increase per year on individual rental units, regardless of amount. In addition, they can charge only up to a six per cent increase, unless they receive approval from the Commission for a higher increase.

In its decision, the Supreme Court concluded that the proposal to give the Residential Tenancy Commission power to make evictions and compliance orders infringed upon the federal jurisdiction in respect of county courts, as set out in The British North America Act.

Williams pointed out that the Court's decision does not mean any Commission decisions are overturned. The Residential Tenancies Act was passed by the Ontario Legislature in June, 1979, but only the selections relating to rent review have been proclaimed in force. The Commission's jurisdiction under these provisions was not in question.

Army pitches two-hitter, Minutemen bat worse than Blue Jays

By Bev Browning

The Madorc Minutemen lost twice last week. Once to the weather on Tuesday and once to the Stirling Juveniles on Thursday.

Every effort was made to play Tuesday's game with Tweed. However, the on and off showers won out at nine-thirty. The cancelled game has been rescheduled for Tuesday, July 21, at 8:30.

In Stirling, on Thursday night, the Minutemen gave up an unearned run in the third inning to drop a close 1-0 decision to the Juveniles. (They are the oldest juveniles I ever did see.)

Andy Faulkner earned the win for Stirling. Faulkner held the Minutemen to three hits (singles by Glenn Graham and Lorie Kirkwood in the first inning and a single for Wayne Willemsen in the third inning), walked none and struck out five.

Brian Armstrong also pitched a superb game. Army gave up one unearned run on two "hits" (only five balls were hit to the outfield), walked and struck out none. Army's record now is 4-2 and the Minutemen's record has dropped to 5 and 4.

The Minutemen are fielding well and receiving excellent pitching. However, the batting is very erratic. The batting is terrible! "How terrible is it?" "The team's total batting average is lower than the Blue Jays!"

On Tuesday, the Minutemen meet Hoards for the second time. (Hoards won 5-1 in Stirling earlier in the schedule.) I have another commitment on Tuesday so the Minutemen are going with a "Mystery Coach". The great "Mysterio" or (Great Wizard of O'Hara) or (G-W00) has been planning his strategies all weekend and almost guarantees a win Tuesday night. Time will tell! Schedule

Tuesday, June 23

African conditions shock district travellers

BY JEANNETTE MOORE

Many area residents watched in shock last Tuesday night's TV documentary by World Vision which pictured the dying and starving conditions of the peoples of the arid parts of West Africa where rain has not fallen for the past five years.

Three local youths have just returned home with firsthand knowledge of those conditions having just spent a year travelling Europe and Africa.

"The people we saw in Northern Kenya were in same pitiable state as those pictured on TV," said George Bluett during an interview with him at his parent's home in Norwood last week. "Tears came to my eyes when I saw those children in the film. It brought their plight back to me. We were in Northern Kenya last Christmas Day and shared what food we had in our truck with a group of hungry children. It didn't do too much to help but it made us feel good to be able to do something."

"We travelled on from there to Southern Kenya, and in a distance of about 500 miles things were a luscious green."

Twenty-five-year-old George Bluett was accompanied on his travels by friends Tom Merchant, a young Hastings electrician, and John McCreadie, cousin of Bob Bluett, a 4-year university grad now returning to study for his Masters in biology at Guelph.

"After completing high school, I went to work for Alcan Aluminum in Scarborough for five years," said George. "I worked overtime and weekends to save money. I had always been interested in travelling and decided if I was ever going to do it this was the time. The three of us started out with $2000 each."

The friends flew to England from New York, crossed over to France and hitchhiked and took trains to Amsterdam where they bought a cheap car and drove on to Germany. Tom Merchant has a brother stationed at the Canadian Army Base at Laar in the Black Forest, South Germany, and the three got jobs working in the kitchen on the base.

"We were able to save another $2,000 in our month working there. We had free board with Tom's brother and free meals, so everything we made was clear," said George. "We travelled about weekends in our car. To me, this was the best part of Germany. I enjoyed that stay the most of any in Europe."

From there the footloose wanderers had to proceed by train to Greece since they ran off a road in Germany and demolished their car. "We spent another month in Greece. They liked the Greek Islands. They are beautiful. We spent two weeks diving and swimming in the blue waters." Having done the Islands they emplaned for Cairo, Egypt, and new lands to discover.

"Egypt was really interesting" is George's verdict. "The people were very friendly. But there was one drawback. They were very conscious we were from the western world and since they think we are all rich, everywhere we went people were looking for handouts or trying to sell us something. They were on you all the time. I didn't like that, but we soon learned enough Arabic to say 'no' and 'I don't want it'. The pyramids and other historical places were fantastic. We spent about a month in Egypt sleeping in youth hostels then took a train and finally a boat down the Nile into the Sudan, the country just south of Egypt and the biggest country in Africa. Our hitchhiking came to an end because it's just not done in Africa. If someone picks you up you have to pay about $10 for 400 miles. It is mostly merchants who travel the roads in cars and they all charge. We travelled to the four corners of Sudan. In Khartoum we met some students who could speak English and anyone we talked to wanted to come to Canada and quickly tried to make friends with us hoping to have a contact here."

"The north of Sudan is Muslim and desert. The south, where the English came in and took over years ago, is Christian and a jungle with the natives still living in the woods and carrying spears, bows and arrows. When you travel down from the north it is strange to see the change from long robes to people wearing nothing."

"We camped out or stayed in the natives' huts. They are the friendliest people I ever met. At one place a woman came out to meet us offering a large plate of water bugs which she had gathered. They consider these a delicacy and like to eat them fresh so pull the legs off to keep their food alive but inactive. We had to decline with thanks but accepted their fruit - oranges and dates - and peanuts. None of us tried the bugs which were offered to us often, but we did eat Kibera which is like a flour. They make bread of it and they fry pieces of goat and dip into the powder. It didn't taste very good. In their huts up to 10 of us would sit on the floor and eat from the same dish dipping in our right hands. The right hand is supposed to be kept clean and the left used for bathroom duties."

After Sudan John set out on his own hoping to get accepted into the university in Nairobi Kenya, to study tropical disease there, but as it turned out, his request was denied and he returned home. Tom and George decided to go on to Kenya also and they were fortunate enough to be approached by a man from Kenya who had driven to the Sudan in his Landrover to pick up a truck which he had left for repair in Sudan. He asked the youths to drive the truck in return for a free ride, lodging and food on the way.

"It took us seven days. That is how we came to spend Christmas in Northern Kenya. The man had brought supplies of food for the trip and we shared it with about 10 little kids. But there are thousands and thousands like them who are starving. It was hard to believe that after only two or three days' travel south in the same country conditions would be so different. The people in Kenya speak English. When we got to Nairobi we asked what was being done for the starving. Little relief seemed to be getting to them. People would shrug and say the northerners should move south."

George had brushed up on his history of the country. "The British took over Kenya and ruled there until 1963," he said. "When they pulled out, the people voted in a president who governed for seven or eight years. He died and the present president, Daniel Moi, was elected for life. The form of government is called Republic."

Tom and George spent two months in Kenya. "We visited the coast, swam in the ocean, then rented a car and went into the game park. That was interesting to see lions, hippos, monkeys in their natural surroundings. We would have liked to stay on longer in Kenya and tried to get jobs but there is high unemployment there and we couldn't manage to land anything. Although we stayed in hostels and some hotels which are cheap there by this time we had to phone home for more money so we knew it was time to head back. We reversed our tracks all through Kenya. Sudan, Egypt back to Germany, worked another month at Laar-then flew to London and back to New York."

George is now waiting to return to his old job at Alcan. "I liked my work there but just got restless. It is nice to be back in beautiful Norwood. Being away and seeing so many countries made me appreciate my own more. Canada is so beautiful and has got so much going for it - such a good life. And we found that Canada is respected around the world."

George Bluett holds two hand-carved figurines he brought back from Africa.

The Norwood youth spent a year travelling Europe and Africa with two companions. He says the experience has made him appreciate Canada more.

Swazi bus ride a real experience

To the editor:

As requested, I am sending you my first epistle unto the Ontarians. For want of a better subject to write upon, this letter will deal mainly with the local Swazi bus service.

I am teaching in a high school in a rather remote area of the Low Veld region of Swaziland. Originally, I was supposed to be teaching woodwork only, but when they found that I had a university degree they gave me Fifth Form Physical Geography and Map Reading as well and they really tried to load me down with Biology too but that I refused - after all, four classes of woodwork, and a class of geography to Cambridge U External "O" levels is enough for me. Very few Swazis have been to university, so I was regarded as a rare bird, I suppose.

The Swazi teachers and students are friendly and interested in me and in Canada also and are reasonably well educated - in fact, a number of the students attending Swazi schools are from South Africa because they want to be taught in English rather than in Afrikaans.

Last weekend I went to Manzini - the nearest "big" town, by Swazi bus and the trip was quite an experience. I was the only white person on the bus, and of course, I am the only white person at the school also.

These buses are somewhat ramshackle conveyances by Canadian standards. They are over-manned, over-worked and under-maintained. They appear to have a crew of five people consisting of a driver who is undoubtedly conscious of his importance with the Swazi transportation system, and who never fails to change down through all four gears before applying the brakes; two persons collect the fares. The first writes out the "tickets" on a scrap of paper, with the date, the origin, the destination and the fare. The companion fare-taker carries a canvas bag into which the fares are deposited and also carries a punch for verifying the "tickets". These two persons also act as relief drivers. In the distance of one mile on the last bus I caught from Sipofaneni to Mhlathuze we had three different drivers. At one time, two drivers were steering the bus while they stood up on either side of the seat while the bus veered from side to side down the dirt road. The other two persons comprising the "crew" guard the door, which cannot be closed because the hinges long ago broke off due to the vibrations caused by the innumerable pot-holes in the "road" and which were replaced by ordinary butt hinges which were never properly aligned. These two people also presumably are there to assist the passengers to unload their multitudinous array of possessions which they load onto the buses.

The aisle of the bus is cluttered with twenty litre drums of kerosene, sacks of meal (maize meal), sugar, bundles of who knows what, attache cases, etc.

The external roof rack is also filled with bundles, cans, boxes and similar accoutrements. It appears to be the duty of the

"doormen" to remove belongings from the roof rack.

On the last bus on which I travelled, an impatient driver "took-off" with one of his cohorts still on top, much to his annoyance as well as to the amusement of the passengers.

Other duties of these doormen seem to include shouting pleasantries and insults to passengers, other road-users and onlookers alike.

While assisting one passenger to unload his sack of sugar from beneath a pile of other passengers' belongings, one of the "doormen" pulled so hard that the sack snagged on some sharp edge, ripped so that when it was lifted it showered nearby passengers so that they were instantly changed into white "sugar-daddies" along with their belongings.

However, in the comic-opera world of Swazi bus lines, nobody bothers unduly. There is lots of good natured banter and much laughter - how different is a ride on a bus or subway train in Toronto, where, with a few exceptions, everyone is an island unto himself.

Best regards,
Ed Simpson.

ONE FOOT IN THE FURROW

BY BOB TROTTER

Agriculture ministers under fire number of provincial federal agriculture ministers have come and gone in the years. Some will that Harry Hayes was best. Others liked Alvin Milton. Even Bud Olsen remembered fondly by a number of farmers.

Eugene Whelan, of course, was a bright spot in Liberal campaigns for at least two elections.

In Ontario, my memory goes back to Bill Stewart who held the portfolio for almost 20 years. When he retired from active politics for health reasons, he left a tremendous void in the provincial cabinet which has not been filled properly.

At a meeting to say goodbye to Bill some years ago, I helped purchase the biggest pair of barn boots we could find in a department store to give to his successor, Bill Newman. They were given to him with the admonition that he was going to fill a big pair of boots. He tried but was not successful. He lost his cabinet post after only a few years in office.

Then came Lorne Henderson.

I have never met him. Like Will Rogers, all I know (about Henderson) is just what I read in the newspapers. What I read gives me a most uncomfortable feeling.

"Don't contradict me," he has told his staff. In other words, he has muzzled every civil servant in the ministry because Keith Pinder of the foodland development branch gave evidence to the Ontario Municipal Board that land, designated by Henderson as unsuitable for big farm machinery, was good farmland.

"We had a meeting with the minister and he told us in no uncertain terms that the situation was not going to happen again," said Vernon Spencer, director of the branch.

I would hate to be a senior official within the ministry these days. Such blatant censorship of people who have a mind of their own and can express it properly is an affront to a democratic system.

Again, just two-three weeks ago, more than 700 farmers jeered derisively at Mr. Henderson in Toronto. I won't go into the famous remark made by Whelan about farmers being lucky to live in a society where they could criticize politicians except to say that it appears some of his leader's arrogance has rubbed off onto Geny.

The crowd of farmers laughed when Henderson said the province has tried to respond to the problems, of Ontario farmers who are harder hit than most segments of the population by the exorbitant interest rates in Canada, especially beef farmers.

"That's b.s. and you know it, Lorne," one farmer yelled.

"We recognize the low prices and high interest rate to the farmer," Henderson said to a chorus of boos and yells.

He blamed those interest rates on the federal government which produced shouts of "backpassing".

No one knows better than this veteran reporter that politicians have a tough job. Cabinet ministers have an even tougher job. They are on call for many more hours than backbenchers. They are under considerable pressure from many places, many people. Why anyone would want to get into politics is beyond me. I can get into enough trouble penning a little deathless prose every week. Like reporters, politicians learn to roll with the punches. They get thick-skinned.

But when the farmers of this country lose faith in their cabinet ministers almost to a man, then that minister should be looking at his own performance.

I am sure that with that majority now at Queen's Park under the Conservative banner, a better administrator must surely be waiting in the wings.

WOODS WATER & WILDLIFE

Bittern is a recluse

BY RON REID Federation of Ontario Naturalists

bittern almost disappear into the background.

A least bittern shows large buffy wing patches when flushed, but its normal escape pattern is through the reeds. With the help of long, unwebbed toes, it can virtually race through the cattails, several feet off the ground, by grasping the stems as it goes. Nesting takes place in early June, on crude platforms of reeds or twigs woven among the marsh vegetation. Two broods of four or five eggs each are not uncommon in a season, since the young hatch out in 16-19 days. After a few days on a diet of regurgitated food, the young soon begin their regular diet of frogs, fishes leeches and insects. In two weeks, they are on their own, but the age of their first flight, which occurs after they leave the nest, is still a mystery.

Least bitterns migrate to the bayou's of Mississippi and Florida for the winter months, but otherwise seldom leave the marsh. Their survival depends totally on the preservation of these productive wildlife habitats. When we lose another marsh to industry or agriculture or housing, we are losing too, part of the population of these unique and interesting birds.

Recycling organized

Canada's first recycling information service has been opened by the Ontario Recycling Information Centre in Toronto.

The centre's staff will answer, by telephone or by mail, inquiries from throughout the province on how to recycle household waste such as newspaper, cans and bottles. The staff will also be able to provide information on local recycling programs, answer questions about waste reduction and recycling and supply guidelines for setting up new recycling programs.

The Centre, located at 41 La Drive, Toronto, M4G

The opening of the centre comes at a critical time. The Ontario tax bill for the collection and disposal of garbage in 1981 will be over $140 million. However, it takes on the average, only 16 minutes per week for a family to participate in their local recycling program.

The Ontario Recycling Information Centre is sponsored by the Recycling Council of Ontario, a private organization established in 1978 by waste managers, community business leaders and local citizens from more than 45 provincial centres.

FARMERS FAVOR BOARDS

The Economic Council of Canada's (ECC) attack on setting boards is undisciplined and based on unrealistic comparisons. They have little to do with the realities of farming, says Barrie, President of the Ontario Federation of Agriculture (OFA) said.

The report charges dairy poultry farmers are receiving excess incomes. "If the academics would look down from their ivory towers and spend some time with the farmers' shoes, they'd know this isn't so," Barrie said.

He said the ECC's charge that dairy producers are being overpaid is unrealistic. "They compare Canadian prices with distressed prices charged when surpluses are dumped on the world market. No one would sell at these low prices on a regular basis."

Barrie said the charges that egg and chicken producers are making too much money are also based on questionable theories.

"Because quotas have a value, they attach a hypothetical return of 12 per cent to that value. This amount is in excess income. It's the farmer never receives this money. How can you pay bills with non-existent interest?"

Barrie challenged the ECC's statement that Canadian dairy farmers are more productive than American farmers.

"They don't realize the two countries use different reporting methods. If you used the same methods, productivity would be roughly equal."

He also said the ECC's charge that Canadian dairy farmers received more for their product is equally false. "In February, U.S. farmers were receiving $34.46 a hundred litres in

"The Quota System of supply management for milk would be abandoned; the farm gate price of milk would fall by 20 per cent; several thousand 'inefficient' milk producers would be forced out of production. The implications for Canadian dairymen would be nothing short of disastrous if such recommendations were followed."

This warning was issued recently by Brian MacDonald, Chairman of the National Farmers Union Dairy Committee, Ontario Region, after a meeting with fellow committee members. Mr. MacDonald, who operates a dairy farm in Frontenac County was referring to recommendations contained in a report released recently in Ottawa, entitled "The Economics of Canadian Dairy Industry Regulation".

The report was prepared by Richard Barichello of the Department of Economics, University of British Columbia, as a background paper for the Economic Council of Canada, which is currently Canadian funds for industrial milk. The Ontario figure at that time was $32.86, which includes the federal subsidy."

The report, he said, is full of erroneous comparisons.

Barrie said he is disgusted that a government body such as the Economic Council of Canada is attacking one of the hardest working sectors of the studying the economic effects of regulation in agriculture.

"We mustn't forget why a supply management system was put in place originally," said Mr. MacDonald. "The objective was to establish a fair price to the efficient producer based on realistic cost, then insure an adequate supply. Mr. Barichello would have the dairymen produce milk at the very minimum price he would have to accept in a so-called free market economy."

Despite disagreeing with Mr. Barichello on a number of points, Mr. MacDonald acknowledged that "high prices currently being paid

Canadian economy. "Farmers are trying to survive in the face of high interest and input costs, yet at the same time they're being charged with profiteering."

Barrie concluded that if government follows the ECC's advice, it will cripple Canada's ability to feed itself, and condemn farmers to a life of debt and poverty for milk quota will mean either the next generation of quota holders will have lost many of the benefits of a supply management system or will have to pass on this extra cost to the consumer."

Mr. MacDonald maintained that "the NFU has not relaxed its stand that quotas should have no value," and said his committee would be meeting with the Ontario Milk Marketing Board in the near future to give an NFU assessment of quota allocation policies currently in effect in Ontario and to make appropriate recommendations.

Go easy on tan

Use a little common sense in the sun this year. The Ontario Safety League reminds you that even when the sun's rays are dispersed by fog or haze you can still get a serious burn if you're exposed too long. Remember too that wind can easily deceive you into mistaking the sun's intensity. Limit your first exposure of the season to 15 minutes and protect all sensitive areas with an extra application of lotion or moisturizer. Getting your tan slowly reduces the possibility of burning and the tan you acquire will provide adequate protection against burning for the rest of the season.

An increased incidence of white grubs is being reported in Ontario this year, particularly in the Niagara Peninsula.

"The Pest Advisory and Diagnostic Clinic, local garden centres and the Niagara Parks School of Horticulture have been besieged with calls about white grubs this spring," says Rick Wukasz, clinic co-ordinator.

For the homeowner, the first symptoms of white grub in lawns are skunks tearing the turf or flocks of starlings and blackbirds settling to feed on the lawn in spring.

"There are three types of white grubs - the Japanese beetle, European chafer, and the June beetle," says Mr. Wukasz. "These grubs feed on fibrous roots of many types of plants, but they prefer the roots and crown of turf grass."

Although the grubs differ

in size, they have several common characteristics. They have C-shaped soft bodies with six long spiny legs, and a brown head capsule. The hind end of the larvae is dark and transparent.

The smallest of the white grubs, the Japanese beetle, is 2 cm (= in.) in length. It is most common in isolated patches along the Lake Erie shores and the Niagara Peninsula. Its life cycle is a annual one, with the adults emerging in early July. The adults feature a brightly colored metallic green head, bronze body and brown wing covers.

"The Japanese beetle is an imported pest and of great concern because as an adult it feeds on a wide variety of ornamentals, nursery stock and fruit trees," says Mr. Wukasz.

The European chafer is found in a belt from the Niagara Peninsula to St. Thomas, but it's spreading. The chafer's appearance is similar to the larger June bug, but lighter brown in color. Like the Japanese beetle, the European chafer has a one-year life cycle with the adult emerging in mid- to late June.

The June beetle is the largest of the three and the first to emerge as an adult in late May to early June. The grub is 4 cm (1.5 in.) in length when full-grown. Adult June beetles mate and lay eggs in the soil in June. The larvae remain in the ground for three years.

"White grubs can do a considerable amount of damage to home lawns," says Mr. Wukasz. "The results of white grub infestation are dead grass that pulls away from the soil like a carpet to expose the grubs feeding within the top 2 to 3 in. of soil during the growing season."

To control white grubs, apply recommended insecticides chlordane, chlorpyrifos or diazinon, and water them in thoroughly. Treatment is necessary when the grubs reach a level of more than five grubs per square foot.

"The best time to control grubs is when you notice the adults," says Mr. Wukasz. "Wait a week then apply the insecticide. By this time the adults will have laid eggs. The young larvae are the most susceptible to the treatment."

The Pest Advisory and Diagnostic Clinic at the University of Guelph, Guelph, Ontario N1G 2W1 would like to receive reports about European chafers and Japanese beetles to keep track of their spread. If you are unsure, send a grub or beetle to the clinic alive in moist soil or preserved in alcohol in an unbreakable container.

"Homeowners can reduce the risk of damage from white grubs by keeping lawns in good condition," says Mr. Wukasz.

Meetings

Sunday, June 28 - Junior Farmer Zone Tractor Rodeo, 9 a.m., Warkworth Fair Grounds.

June 30 - July 2 - 4-H Regional Conference, Trent University, Peterborough.

1980 ROP Results - The Record of Performance results for Dairy Cattle for the year 1980 have recently been released by the Canada Department of Agriculture's Livestock Division, responsible for the testing program. The results are based on the composite Breed Class Average of milk and fat. In 1980 the high testing herd in the county goes to Norm Lovshin of #4 Cobourg. The Lovshin herd recorded a BCA composite of 179.176 for milk and 182 for fat, on a total of 25 records. In terms of milk production, this is an average of 8,221 kilograms (approximately 18,000 lbs.) of milk and 313 kilograms (approximately 688 lbs.) of fat. The Lovshin herd edged ahead of Hoskin Bros. Stonybrook Farm, one of the top producing herds in the province for a number of years. The Stonybrook herd average on 60 records was 177 for milk and 176 for fat for a composite BCA of 176.5. This represents 8,632 kg (18,990 lbs.) of milk and 317 kg (698 lbs.) of fat. In third position was the herd of Herbert Hendy and Son of Campbellford with a composite BCA of 172.5 - 174 for milk and 171 for fat on 25 records. The Hendy herd is one of the few Ayrshire herds in the area. The herd of Art Smith of Codrington recorded a composite BCA of 169.5 - 166 for milk and 173 for fat on 22 records. Morley Philp's herd of #4 Cobourg was next with a BCA of 155 for milk and 168 for fat for a composite of 161.5 on 32 records. Two herds recorded composite BCA's of 157. The Ingholm Farms of #3 Campbellford had 51 records of a BCA of 156 for milk and 158 for fat, while the herd of James Covey, #17 Hastings, recorded a BCA of 152 for milk and 162 for fat on 27 records. These records represent the top six ROP herds out of a total of approximately 75 enrolled in the ROP program in Northumberland County. In addition there are approximately another 90 herds enrolled under the DHIA program out of a total of approximately 300 registered milk producers.

Sample Forages Now - One of the management practices of benefit to livestock producers, particularly dairymen, is forage testing and feed analysis. The simplest and most representative sample of forages can be obtained by sampling when the silo is being filled or hay is being put in the mow. For silage the simplest method is to place a handful or two from every third or fourth load in a plastic garbage bag. The garbage bag of samples can then be mixed and placed in a smaller bag and stored in the freezer. When all samples are taken a composite mix can be submitted for analysis using the sampling kits available through the local offices of the Ministry of Agriculture and Food. Baled hay requires a core sampler. Setting aside one or two bales from each field will make it possible to obtain a representative composite sample at some date in the future. The Feed Advisory Service offers three types of feed analysis to help in formulating rations: The first costs $7 and is a dry matter and crude protein test only. Type 2 includes dry matter, crude protein along with calcium, magnesium, potassium and phosphorus. This test is $13. The third type includes the above along with a test for the trace elements, manganese, copper and zinc. It costs $16. There is also a digestible protein test available for an additional $8.

Cough is a symptom

A loud, raspy "cough" in a crowded theater is a nuisance to those about him, but consider that the common cough is a part of the body's vital defense or immune system.

The Ontario Lung Association reminds that, physiologically speaking, the cough is: "an extremely common, physically remarkable and potentially life-saving reflex action."

Moreover, during a cough a powerful rush of air is expelled from the respiratory tract, sometimes at a velocity of up to 500 miles per hour. The usual purpose of the cough is to clear the airways of some irritating or obstructing substance that potentially could damage the lungs, or interfere with the smooth exchange of oxygen and carbon dioxide in the body.

Pulmonary specialists explain that "people who are unable to cough, such as those under general anesthesia, are in danger of serious disease (and even death) because they cannot protect their lower respiratory tracts from foreign substances...."

The Ontario Lung Association offers these two important reminders about all coughs:

A cough is not a disease, but rather a symptom — that something is wrong in the body. Anyone who has a cough that lasts more than a couple of weeks should be seen by a doctor, who may in turn suggest an examination by a respiratory disease specialist.

Most coughs are self-limiting; that is, they go away in a few weeks, even if you do nothing at all. If you are a cigarette smoker, a cough is in your future. However, if you quit smoking that cough will most likely disappear within four weeks.

Family Farms Versus High Interest Rates - The family farm structure of Canadian agriculture must be ensured for the future. This does not mean small, inefficient farmers, although increased size cannot be used as an interchangeable word for efficiency.

Family farming is an agriculture based on owner-operated family enterprises. There is grave danger, with the increasing capital investment needed to farm, and the attractiveness of land as an investment hedge in an inflationary economy, that the land will be gradually alienated from the people who farm it, and that in particular large corporate landholdings may be developed that are not family farm corporations, but large scale investment holdings by nonfarm investors.

Policies must be designed to prevent this from happening. The family farm structure will give us a better, more valuable rural society. The land will be better farmed, will be better cared for, will be more productive, if this basis of our agriculture is preserved.

The ability of young farmers to acquire land is becoming financially prohibitive, unless special measures are taken.

A number of concerned farmers in Hastings County attended a public meeting in Toronto last week to discuss economic problems facing many members of Ontario's farm community.

The OFA called upon the provincial government to provide low-cost, long-term financing, as well as aid for short-term debt.

Lorne Henderson, Ontario Agriculture Minister, was in attendance along with the Federal Minister of Agriculture, Eugene Whalen. Mr. Whalen indicated that those farmers with supply management, such as dairy, eggs or broilers, were in a better position than those without a quota controlled marketing system.

Mr. Henderson noted that Ontario has the same sow, weaner stabilization programme as Quebec but the Federal government penalized it by 7 million dollars. Farmers continued to protest that they wanted "parity with Quebec farmers".

Bill Davis, Premier of Ontario, indicated concern for the farming community. Glenn Flaten, President of Canadian Federation of Agriculture, said that "Farm businesses lose their viability as a workable operation because of floating interest rates."

New baler line builds solid, stackable bales

To build solid, square-cornered bales consistently, you need consistent control of the hay. And John Deere's new 327, 337 and 347 Balers give that control from the moment hay touches the pickup.

First of all, we added two extra rows of teeth to help you take in all the hay in today's wider windrows. The 337 and 347 have 156 teeth. The 327 has 88. There's even an improved compressor that floats right with the pickup to give you consistent compression as you go over bumps and dips.

Next, our floating tapered auger and adjustable feeder forks take over to keep material flowing evenly. Consistent control continues right up to the time our new knottor puts the finishing touch on the solid bales.

Stop by today and start making solid, stackable bales with John Deere's solid new 14 x 18 balers.

We'll pay you up to $800 to get off oil heat

YOU'LL SAVE MONEY BY GETTING OFF OIL BECAUSE THE PRICE OF OIL IS ESCALATING, AND WILL CONTINUE TO DO SO.

Heating with oil is a habit Canadians acquired when oil was plentiful and cheap. Today sources of oil are unreliable and increasingly more expensive, so we just have to kick the habit. The habit won't be hard to break because Canada has an abundance of energy alternatives that are plentiful and are ultimately cheaper than oil.

The Canada Oil Substitution Program (COSP), is a major part of the federal government's National Energy Program. COSP is designed to help reduce the use of oil for home heating in every province to no more than 10 per cent of total household energy use by 1990.

COSP is a 10-year program that offers grants of up to $800 covering half the cost of equipment and labour for changing your space or hot water heating system from oil to natural gas, electricity, propane or renewable energy sources such as wood and solar. The COSP grant is taxable.

The oil substitution of a centrally heated building unit that contains two or more self-contained dwelling units can qualify for COSP grants ranging from $1,000 to $5,500.

HOW TO APPLY FOR YOUR GRANT

Those of you who are ready to get off oil, or have switched from oil since October 28, 1980, ask for grant information from:

- your nearest natural gas or electric utility;
- the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources (EMR) office, about conversion to wood or solar heat or another renewable energy source. EMR is located at: 2242 Lakeshore Boulevard W. Toronto, Ontario M8V 1A5
Call: (416) 252-5866 or toll-free: 1-800-268-2207

PLAN AHEAD FOR BEST SAVINGS

To start planning your move off oil, the federal Department of Energy, Mines and Resources can help you:

- assess your home's energy efficiency by means of a free computerized EnerSave questionnaire;
- insulate your home under the Canadian Home Insulation Program (CHIP) which provides taxable grants of up to $500.

Insulation is not a requirement of COSP, but it makes sense to have a well insulated home before you change your heating system. The better your insulation the smaller-sized heating system you'll need when you switch off oil.

NFU wants meat board

The District Directors of National Farmers Union Region 3, (Ontario), made the decision at a recent meeting in Malton to launch a concrete proposal in Ontario and throughout Canada for a National Meat Marketing Program.

"The red meat industry in Ontario is in a crisis situation and the NFU has long been a supporter of orderly marketing with supply management in the meat industry," Marie Bright, Co-ordinator for Region 3 of the NFU said recently. "If ever there was a time when farmers should be putting pressure on both the federal and provincial governments to have supply management put into place, it is now."

"Interest rates are skyrocketing with no pricing formula in place to ensure the farmers their cost of production; more and more farmers are going bankrupt. Meat producers are realizing to have a stable income they must accept the principles of supply management or a National Meat authority. This also means that farmers are beginning to accept certain regulations and controls to have a viable industry."

"Lorne Henderson and Eugene Whelan had better get on the bit and be prepared to deal with meat legislation in the very near future because all indications are that farmers won't be impressed this time around in the meat cycle even if prices should come back to anywhere near the cost of production. Meat producers are looking for long-term stability and a guarantee their life's work won't be taken from them at the whim of spiralling interest rates or any other input costs increase."

Mrs. Bright said the NFU will be holding mass meetings across Ontario hoping to draw a cross-section from both rural and urban people alike to discuss the National Meat Authority Proposal. Reality has hit. If consumers want a supply of fresh meat in Canada, they will have to be willing to pay the price. The regulatory control will, under this system be on corporate pricing as well as farm pricing.

"In the long term this program will be a definite benefit to consumers," concluded Mrs. Bright.

4-Hers in Guelph

The 4-H Homemaking Club program helps young people become responsible adults and part of that training is the annual provincial 4-H Homemaking Club Conference at the University of Guelph June 23 to 26.

This year, 159 rural young people were chosen to participate in the conference says Joyce Canning, Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food home economist and conference co-ordinator.

The delegates are selected based on their standard of work and involvement in local 4-H Homemaking Clubs. Each county, region and district in the province is entitled to send representatives based on the size of membership.

"The conference is an opportunity to stimulate the members to develop their potential as individuals and 4-H members," says Ms. Canning. "It also gives members some idea of the scope of the 4-H organization so they can see a sense of involvement past the local club level."

Dimensions '81 addresses the theme - Destination... Life. Dr. Sam Luker, of the School of Continuing Education and Part-time Studies at the University of Guelph is presenting the theme address - Roles and Goals of the Family in the Eighties.

The thought-provoking participate in 4-H Homemaking Clubs in Ontario. Club projects are planned around basic homemaking skills, interior decorating.

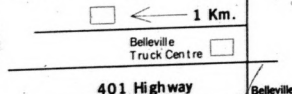

More than 15,000 young people, aged 12 to 26, conference program also looks at career opportunities, and provides new ideas to take home to local clubs. One afternoon session offers the delegates a chance to choose a special interest area from a selection including photography, drama, music, public speaking and outdoor activities.

There are also sessions dealing with mental and physical fitness along with sessions to evaluate current 4-H programs and tours of the University of Guelph.

Waste dumping deplored

Dear Sir:

While it may be mildly entertaining to see the other evening in Bancroft. Mr. Rollins and Mr. Pollock publically accusing each other of dereliction of duty as MPPs, such heated personal accusations miss the point in reassuring Bancroft that Scarborough's and others', perhaps, radioactive wastes are not to be dumped in Hastings County.

Mr. Rollins has and Mr. Pollock do represent a veteran Ontario government that has ignored and broken its own environmental legislation in respect to proposals for the disposal of highly toxic industrial wastes. In defiance of its own regulations, this Government has refused public environmental hearings at the proposed site at Cayuga, Ontario. It has not conducted intensive studies as to the suitability of Cayuga as a waste site for toxic wastes and it now seems that hundreds of thousands of taxpayers' dollars have been spent exploring other sites when the decision of Cayuga had already been made two years ago. Citizens of Bancroft can have scant hope of escaping 4,000 tonnes of low-level radioactive imported soil from such an unresponsive and irresponsible provincial government.

Citizen Rollins now demands preventive action at Bancroft. Did MPP Rollins demand action on behalf of Cayuga citizens' protection?

Mr. Pollock excuses himself on the Bancroft problems, claiming that it is a federal government and AECB issue. God help those who put their trust in AECB's word. On March 15, 1977, I asked four AECB experts at a conservation authority meeting in Frankford, Ontario, how large an area AECB wanted for the proposed nuclear waste dump at Madoc. The reply, "Five acres". On March 16, 1977, at a large public meeting in Madoc, numerous persons pressed to know if any agreement had been entered into by any level of government and AECB in regard to a nuclear waste site at Madoc. We were assured by AECB that there was absolutely no such accord.

In mid-June, 1977, it was learned that on the very morning of that March 16th, AECB and the Ontario Government had signed a tentative agreement involving thousands of acres of land in the Madoc area for a nuclear waste dump site. Our environment, our health and our democracy are at risk through such actions as these. Bancroft citizens can by their concern and efforts ensure that elected members of parliament, provincial and federal governments and AECB fulfill their promises and their own legislation. Bancroft can make democracy work better for all of us.

Yours truly
Donald Wilson

Although I have been called by a variety of exotic names during the course of my long and sometimes arduous passage through this trauma which we call an existence, I cannot recall ever having been saddled with an epithet even remotely resembling that of saintly.

So you might be tempted to wonder why today I want to talk to you about saints.

Because of all the canonized specialists who haphazardly decorate our illustrious calendar with their specific qualifications, my favorite has to be St. Valentine for no other reason than the fact that he personifies love and compassion - a most ethereal quality - as well as good fellowship and a consistently creditable concern for his fellow men.

That doesn't necessarily imply the kind of love that erupts at this time of the year, when the clocks are pushed on an hour to rob us of sixty minutes of good slonking time, the buds begin to bubble on the branches and the young men's fancies lightly turn to thoughts of long grass.

I'm talking about the kind of love that is fostered and nurtured by a continuing affinity and empathy between one person and another, regardless of sex, race and colour, that is so sadly lacking in this turmoil that we so glibly call living.

Just a general, all round affection, in fact, for our friends and our neighbours in its least heterosexual vein.

And I believe that's what St. Valentine's message is all about.

Naturally when St. Valentine's Day comes around in February it's very convenient to sashay swiftly, according to our contemporary style, into the nearest florist's establishment flashing a Chargex card or two at him, and dashing into an adjacent drug store with the same credit card to latch onto a box of Black Magic for the little lady, just so she won't be able to say we didn't remember the occasion.

But I believe that St. Valentine's Day should stretch just a little further than being an excuse for kids in kindergarten to fashion some kind of heart-shaped gargoyles out of coloured crayons and a sheath of sticky paper for their mothers to get a lump in the throat over.

Mind you, it's just as well to remember that some of those other saints have their brief moment annually too. Some of them have been adopted by one country or another, and we usually get to share them when they bring them out of the closet to air them for a day, especially if we happen to be looking around for an excuse to celebrate something.

Like St. Patrick, for instance.

And who, in this dreary day, with all its trauma, trials and tribulations isn't looking for a way to let their hair down, even if it's only for a saint, provided they have the necessary where-withal to pay the high cost of quenching.

Now take St. George, for example. Here is a highly revered, heroic character as there ever was one, so very precious to the British people, mainly because he affords them a day off once a year. You will remember him as the guy who swung the machete at a dragon, fixed his little wagon, the poor dumb brute, just so he could make time with an innocent blonde who was probably only trying to make a pet out of the thing. And St. George hasn't stopped bragging about it since.

The maiden, I mean, not the dragon.

And of course there's always St. David of Wales, the one who seems to spend his time looking around for somewhere to have a leak.

Not to mention St. Andrew of Scotland, the laddie who plays golf all day and the bagpipes all night, or so it seems if you're in Scotland, and a good many of you know what I think about the bagpipes after that little episode 'on Remembrance Day that I once told you about.

Now take St. Francis. They say he was Assisi.

Then there was Christopher, you may recall, whose job it was to travel with us on the highway and make sure we didn't go through any red lights. His useful.

Help is available to pay your OHIP premiums.

Ontario residents with low incomes are entitled to assistance in paying OHIP premiums. More importantly, the amount has been changed in the most recent Ontario Budget.

If your income as a single person is less than $8,200 or your total income as a family of four, for example, is below $14,000, you may be eligible for assistance to pay all or part of your premiums.

As always, pensioners or those receiving social assistance continue to receive OHIP coverage without charge.

The best way to check your eligibility is to contact your local OHIP office. It's listed in the Blue Pages of your telephone directory under Government Services.

Please ask because you may very well qualify for OHIP assistance today, even though you might not have in the past.

S TES

ness came to a sorry end when they introduced the new seat belt law, so they laid him off, terminated his contract and put the insurance rates up again.

And what about the most famous of them all: St. Nicholas himself. We can't say too much about him except to note that he must be a poor manager. He's always in the red.

And there's St. Joan too, you see, the French heroine who led an army one day against a bunch of tyrannical trespassers. But she wasn't made of flesh and blood like the rest of us, you know. No, they say she was made of Orleans, whatever that is.

More recently, you may have heard, there was the new patron saint of Germany, St. Adolf, who wrought a considerable mischief before he finally faded from view, bought a hotel in Alberta and wrote a book called Mein Banff.

But to get back to St. Valentine. Now he was something else again.

You see, Valentine tries to teach us that we should be more considerate towards other people and he is usually in the depths of depression because nobody seems to take any notice of him.

For one thing he wants us to be more courteous when we're driving about the place and to be more thoughtful when we're parking our cars outside the post office and the Dominion Store parking lot, so that we leave room for other people during the busy hours on Friday evening.

He tries to explain to us that we should be more helpful to our fellow men whenever we see a chance to assist them in their need, or when they're in some kind of a difficulty, instead of putting on our blinkers and passing by on the other side, because we don't want to be involved.

He tells us not to hammer on the horn when somebody is a split second late in moving off when the light changes to green, and he's also the one who prods us to wait a second or two out of our extremely pressing day, when we're not going anywhere in particular, to let somebody out of a sideroad into the line of traffic, so he won't have to sit there all day on a Friday when all the world wants to get the hell out of town.

St. Valentine is the one who wants us to choose our words with greater care so that we don't use the vicious or obscene ones which are intended to distress or embarrass; instead he wants us to pick the words we know won't wound irrevocably, because he reminds us constantly that words can be more hurtful than swords, and that a dagger thrust will heal up and leave little or no trace, whereas a word may leave a scar that will never heal or be erased or repaired.

Valentine comes along, in fact, to let us know that there is a host of people existing on the crust of this little old world who are infinitely worse off than we are, and that we should be thankful for what we have and should try to make an inventory of the material things we possess and the blessings that come our way, instead of eternally listing those other things we think we need.

He asks us to spend more time considering the plight of others, and less time pondering our own problems and our shortages, if only for one day a year.

In fact he wants us to know that there are people actually starving on the face of this miraculous old sphere of ours, for whom we have no more affinity than what we read about them in a newspaper, if we just happen to spot the item after we've finished with the sports page and the comics, and what we hear about them on the idiot box, if we haven't already gone to the fridge for a couple of beers.

But just the same that's what St. Valentine is trying to tell us. So he's got to be my favorite, if it's only for trying.

But just in case you haven't heard, we're planning to adopt a patron saint right here in Canada, in an effort to keep up with the neighbours.

The only thing is we'll have to wait until after the next election, whenever that's going to be, before we can proclaim him.

When he's retired, that is.

Are loons losing?

Will the wailing and yodelling cries of the loon continue to be heard in Ontario's cottage country and northland? To many people the Common Loon, a large diving bird with a strange and beautiful vocal repertoire, is the very symbol of our wilderness lakes. But could the loon population be on the decline?

With over 250,000 lakes in Ontario the loon should have no trouble finding a secluded home. But a growing number of lakes are losing their wilderness character as a result of high density lakeshore development and some may be silently dying from the effects of acid rain. A dead lake can still look beautiful but it literally lacks life — and this means no fish for dinner, either for the recreational fisherman or for fish-eating birds such as the loon.

To find out whether the loon is being affected by recreational developments and acid rain, the Ontario Lakes Loon Survey is seeking information on the status and distribution of loons in Ontario. If you know of a lake that is frequented by loons (or used to have loons but doesn't now) then the Ontario Lakes Loon Survey will welcome your help.

The Common Loon is easily recognized by its eerie calls and, when seen swimming on a lake, by its black neck with a white "necklace" and by its boldly checkered back. "Loons need a quiet shore or small island to nest and, of course, they must have fish to feed their young," commented Bet Silieff, project biologist. "We are concerned that acid rain will be bad news not only for the fisherman but also for the loons which depend on fish for their survival."

The Ontario Lakes Loon Survey aims to document the present distribution of the Common Loon and monitor any changes that might occur in the next few years. "The Loon Survey would appreciate hearing from anyone who is willing to help with our survey," says Ms. Silieff. Just write to her c/o Ontario Lakes Loon Survey, P.O. Box 160, Port Rowan, Ontario N0E 1M0 and she will send you a short questionnaire which will help you to report information about the loons on your lake.

The Ontario Lakes Loon Survey is a project of the Long Point Bird Observatory, a non-profit, non-government conservation research and educational organization with headquarters at Port Rowan, Ontario.

Money in hay

* Selling hay is changing from a neighbour-to-neighbour transaction into a full-fledged cash crop operation in some parts of Ontario, but a successful marketing system still eludes most farmers.

A committee comprising interested producers, dealers and Ontario Ministry of Agriculture and Food representatives is searching for some answers to the many problems plaguing hay marketing.

"We're trying to look at all aspects of marketing hay," says Galen Driver, committee chairman and director of the ministry's soils and crops branch.

The committee is discussing quality standards, transportation costs, packing methods, costs involved in setting up a hay business, and a central agency for organizing hay sales.

"Many Ontario cash crop farmers are very interested in rotating hay with row crops to improve soil structure," says Rob McLaughlin of the University of Guelph.

"Cash crop farmers are just trying to get a legume into their rotation," he says. "Most don't have cattle, so they need a market for their crop."

One alternative is growing red clover for seed. After one year, farmers see improvements in yield and substantial savings on fertilizer and insecticides.

But, says Dr. McLaughlin, a farmer can harvest hay and leave a legume standing longer to get even more benefit. A two to three year stand of alfalfa is ideal.

Hay marketing is haphazard and often satisfies neither producer nor buyer, says Dr. McLaughlin. Traditionally, he says, 90 per cent of all hay sold is sold within 24 km (15 mi) of its origin. Quality standards are practically non-existent, and hay quality is judged by looking at the color of a bale and smelling the hay.

"There is little difference now in price between good and poor quality hay," says Dr. McLaughlin. "Farmers don't have a lot of incentive to produce excellent hay."

Transportation difficulties make shipping hay more expensive than producing it. The hay committee is looking into bale compressors, pellets and even container shipping. Dr. McLaughlin says a central marketing system would improve sales.

Liberals protest dumping

The Liberal Association of Hastings Frontenac Lennox and Addington objects in the strongest terms possible to plans announced by the Atomic Energy Control Board to move radio-active waste from Scarborough to Faraday Township in this Federal constituency.

These plans were announced without adequate consultation with residents of this area. As a result, the municipality of Faraday Township has now passed a resolution opposing the transfer of this waste. We, the Federal Liberals of this area, support the rights of property owners and taxpayers to decide on such important and controversial subjects as accepting or rejecting nuclear waste.

The key issue is not how much waste or how "safe" it might be. Rather, the democratic principle at issue is the right of local people to decide. This principle of public involvement in nuclear waste issues was agreed to by the Porter Commission, the Hare Commission and Hon. Alastair Gillespie when he was Minister of Energy.

On behalf of our friends and neighbors in North Hastings County, we demand that these plans be stopped immediately by the Provincial and Federal Governments until complete and proper public involvement in this decision is arranged.

Insurance answers

by Basil N. Steggle, FIC, CIB (Ont.)

Q: "Can you tell me what I should do if I'm ever in a car accident?"

A: "The first rule is to keep in the glove compartment of your car, a list of what should be done. That way, you don't forget important matters in the heat of the moment. Your insurance agent/broker will give you such a list for the asking.

The first steps are obvious. If anyone is injured, call an ambulance. Then, phone the police immediately. While you are waiting for the police to arrive, get as much information as you can from those in the other vehicle and from witnesses: names, addresses, telephone numbers, make, model and license number of the other vehicle, the name of the other insurance company, policy number and agent. Write all this information down very carefully.

Next, make notes of the location of the accident. A diagram of how the accident occurred, the position of the vehicles, condition of the road and so on. Make sure you get the name and division of the police officer.

If your car is drivable, get two estimates from shops that you are prepared to deal with. Or, arrange to take your car to an Insurance Bureau of Canada drive-in appraisal centre. If your car isn't drivable, phone for a tow truck to take it to the nearest garage of your choice. Call your insurance agent/broker at the earliest convenient time. He or she will then start the ball rolling on a settlement of your claim, as well as making sure that your claim is handled as promptly and efficiently as possible by the insurance company.

Incidentally, if the accident was not your fault, it will not affect your insurance premiums. Even if it was your fault there's a chance your rates won't go up, especially if you've had a good driving record over the last five years."

SUMMER OUTDOOR AND HOME IMPROVEMENT SPECIAL

LEAVING NOTHING BUT FOOTPRINTS, and this couple is pitching in to leave their campsite sparkling clean for the next campers who visit Land Between The Lakes in western Kentucky. Whether you're camping, touring or just sightseeing, pick up behind you.

A clean Outdoors starts in your own home town

Fine manners need the support of fine manners in others.

So said Ralph Waldo Emerson more than a hundred years ago. And his discriminating observation pertains today as well.

How often have you arrived at a clean campsite, kept it in impeccable condition while you used it, cleaned it up when you left, only to find that your neighbor's trash blows over to your spot... that passing motorists toss empty cans AT your trash basket, but never IN the basket... that hikers toss pull-off tabs over their shoulders into your area.

And you yourself could be guilty of grinding out cigarettes in the dirt and leaving them there.

Aluminum cans, pull-off tabs and cigarette filters do not decompose. They stay on the land and pollute.

Even worse, they cause accidents to people and wildlife. Face it, little children do not look where they're going. They run wildly-nilly, often in bare feet, and one small cut on the bottom of one small foot can disrupt a vacation quicker than you can say, "Everybody in the pool."

Good manners begin at home. Do you grind out cigarettes on your porch floor and leave them there? Do you toss them on your lawn and forget them? Do you throw garbage in the general direction of your trash can and hope it goes in?

New York City is trying to clean up its image with a campaign titled "Don't Dump on New York" with the plea to its citizens to "Sweep it... Bag it... Can it..."

Almost every city in the hemisphere displays signs asking citizens and tourists to put trash in containers... "Every Litter Bit Hurts"... "Toss It In"... "Keep (city) Green..."

The U.S. National Parks Service maintains a returnable program in its system. Where feasible, beverages are sold in aluminum cans or glass bottles and an extra five cents is collected by the retailer. When these cans or bottles are brought in to collection centers, the deposit is returned to the camper.

The aluminum cans are, in turn, collected by the beverage distributors who eventually deliver them to the manufacturer in the recyclable program that saves both material and electric energy.

Parks-Canada's slogan is "Keep Your Parks Clean." As an incentive for campers going into the deep woods, they have a pack in-pack out campaign wherein garbage bags are supplied so hikers can bring out what they take in.

Throwing trash on the street is the first step toward littering. Why does the person—so fastidious about himself and his own habitat—unthinkingly (one hopes it is not deliberate) toss trash in the streets?

Learn to keep your neighborhood clean, and you will automatically keep the Great Outdoors clean. Bad habits are easy to change. Good habits stay with us all our lives.

Be a good neighbor at home and away; lend the support of your fine manners to others.

Maintenance-free vinyl siding adds to home's real estate value

Today's real estate prices and high construction costs make it more worthwhile than ever to renovate and upgrade older homes.

Whether a contractor installs it, or homeowners do it themselves, maintenance-free solid vinyl siding adds value to the home and provides the homeowner with increased leisure time to enjoy it.

Vinyl siding's good looks can enhance a new home's appearance or dramatically restore an older home's beauty without ever having to be painted.

Made of rigid polyvinyl chloride compound, or PVC, vinyl siding is one of the toughest building materials available today.

The colour goes all the way through this durable siding so scratches barely show and it effectively resists fading.

An occasional hosing to remove surface dust is all that's needed to keep the home's exterior looking new.

Vinyl siding, after years of research to perfect it, is today a superior building material and it is surprisingly economical.

Unlike wood siding, vinyl won't absorb moisture, so it won't warp or mildew. It is impervious to termites and vermin, and to most destructive chemical pollutants in the atmosphere. Unlike metal, it can't rust or corrode, and it will bounce back from most dents caused by normal blows from lawnmowers, bikes and balls.

A vinyl clad house is also a quieter house. Vinyl being plastic, it absorbs the sound of rain and hail as opposed to metal sidings which magnify these sounds and contribute to the drumbeat effect so obvious during a rainstorm.

Since plastic does not conduct heat as metal does, vinyl siding will be cooler in the summer and warmer in the winter; it will keep the temperature of the house itself within the same range.

Some of the new sidings, such as Weldwood's Vinylsiding, are beautifully textured, and come in both vertical and horizontal styles and in several pleasant colours.

Softfits and accessories are colour-matched and easy to use to give a professional finishing touch around windows and doors, corners and eaves.

Another plus feature of Weldwood Vinylsiding is its 30-year pro-rated warranty. This long range guarantee reflects the confidence Weldwood has in this superior building material.

Truly, vinyl is the siding with the solid protection. And, with people looking for more and more leisure time, maintenance-free vinyl siding is here to stay.

FOR THE OWNERS of this older farmhouse, re-siding with vinyl has meant an end to regular exterior painting. They chose a double four-inch siding with a wood grain pattern to duplicate the effect of the original wooden clapboard.

Vacations in the Great Outdoors are even more enjoyable when you take an instant camera along, whether you're visiting a local campsite or a state park such as Kenlake in Western Kentucky.

During each action-packed day, it's fun to pass around the color prints you've taken of family and friends.

If you're using the new Kodak Colorburst 300 instant camera with its convenient built-in electronic flash, it's easy to keep shooting when the weather darkens or events move indoors.

The Kodak experts report that "people pictures" are among the most popular type for instant photography. Instant shots of your spouse with a big—or not so big—fishing catch, or of your son munching a hot dog just off the campfire are fun to see at the time, to review at day's end, to save as part of a photo story of your trip, or to slip into instant postcards (available at photo dealers) and send to loved ones.

To help you take clear instant pictures, here are some tips from the photo experts:

- Aim for one subject per picture. Avoid the temptation to include assorted background matter that can easily clutter a scene and detract from your main subject. You eliminate clutter, before snapping, by changing your angle or moving closer.

- Use a touch of the natural surroundings to frame and draw attention toward your photo subject. For instance, use wild blossoms in the foreground of a posed view of your daughter, or a portion of an old wood fence to enclose a long-range shot of a weathered farm house.

- Take a series of instant pictures for every activity and destination, forming "chapters" in an eventual photo story of your vacation. Remember to include title shots of signs, maps and recognizable landmarks to use as an introduction to the various chapters.

- Get as close to your subject as your camera permits—three-and-a-half feet with Colorburst instant cameras. Close-ups of travel companions, especially those taken with instant cameras, are usually very appealing due to increased color quality and sharpness.

- Use your flash outdoors, as well as indoors, to fill in details of a scene. When picturing a person in the woods or some other shaded area, flash can be helpful to fill in facial detail. Flash is also helpful for snapping backlit subjects for the same reason.

- Make friends with instant pictures. When you picture other fishermen, hikers, swimmers or campers, offer the prints and make new acquaintances.

- Avoid placing the center of interest smack in the middle of the picture, or else you're liable to wind up with a print that appears split in half. Instead, position the main subject slightly to the upper or lower right or left of center.

- Remember to pack plenty of extra film. Although photo dealers are located in most cities and towns, many of your Great Outdoor adventures are bound to happen miles from civilization.

And it's a shame to miss a great shot simply because of a film shortage.

Wood beam ceilings and trim no longer have to weigh—or cost—a ton.

A new realistic looking system of vinyl-covered "composite woodboard" has been developed by a Montreal company and it not only looks like the real thing, but is economical. You can revitalize a 12-by-16-foot room for approximately $350—and you can do it all yourself.

It's called the Decor-Beam System and is produced by Nordik Plastic Industries Company Ltd.

"Originally, our company sold only to professional builders and contractors," explained company president Michael Lerch.

"We are now expanding into the do-it-yourself market, offering the same professional standards and quality to homeowners at the retail level."

Unlike plastic or plastic foam

"beams," the Decor-Beam "U"-shaped shell is made of sturdy particle board and permanently covered with durable vinyl.

The vinyl covering is resistant to abrasion and soiling, and the particle board gives it structural strength as well as dimensional and sectional rigidity.

The vinyl surfaces of each beam are textured to look both and feel like the massive slabs of timber they appear to be.

Aside from covering walls and ceilings, easy-to-use Decor-Beams can also conceal pipes and electrical wiring for lighting fixtures to be retained by the Beam.

Home hobbyists can also use the Decor-Beam System to create bars, bookshelves, room dividers and other building projects which can either stand out on their own or complement matching ceiling and wall trim.

Lerch admitted he was surprised to see how many different ways Decor-Beams are used.

"When we started the Decor-Beam line, we were just thinking about ceilings and walls. The other uses people have come up with... Well, it just shows how creative people can be."

Decor-Beams come in three wood finishes: Contempor Oak (light finish), Georgian Pine (medium finish) and Tudor Pine (dark finish).

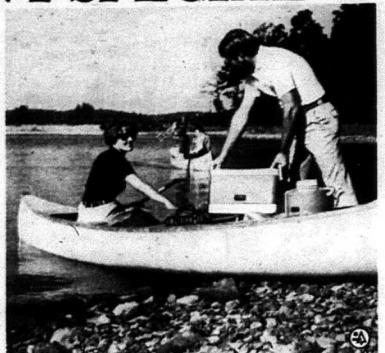

They also come in a variety of sizes.

And, they are economical. An eight-foot length of four-by-six-inch beam is designed to sell for less than $20. Beams also come in 4-by-4, 2-by-4 and 2-by-6 inch widths in six-foot and eight-foot lengths.

The 1-by-3, 1-by-4 and 1-by-6 inch width boards are available in eight-foot lengths.

Corner braces, in 4-by-4 and 6-by-6 widths, are 16 inches long and are pre-cut for easy fitting. Also available are panels of matching Decor-Beam wainscoting, 32-by-48-inches; 36-inch-wide rolls of matching sheet vinyl, and eight-foot lengths of 1/2-by-1 1/2 inch battens.

For more information about Decor-Beam System, write Nordik at 11880 57th Ave., Riviere des Prairies, Montreal, Quebec H1E 2M7.

EMBARKATION—A properly loaded canoe is unlikely to capsize. A cooler containing the major food supply, which is generally the heaviest item to be loaded, should be placed in the canoe just to the rear of center with other gear evenly placed around it. Once loaded, it's cast off and paddle away.

Advance planning Makes canoe trips even more pleasant

North America's oldest form of water-borne transportation is enjoying increasing popularity today.

More and more people are taking to canoes as a way to escape the concrete and macadam of civilization—if only for a few brief hours or a couple of days.

Today's canoes are light enough to be lifted by one or two persons from the top of your automobile once you reach the nearest river or lake. They're designed so that old hazard about overturning is largely a thing of the past if the canoe is properly packed.

To keep your return to the wilderness the pleasure it should be takes some advance planning, and safety should be the keynote of any wilderness expedition.

Experts' hints
Outdoors experts offer these hints.

Don't take on more than you are physically able to handle. Always wear a life preserver or flotation device. And leave the white water trips to the experts.

Unless you're in top physical shape—with strong arms and back—keep each day's travel distance short.

Canoeing has one major advantage over other forms of wilderness travel. You can take with you plenty of clothing, a wide range of foods and equipment, along with overnight shelter if the romantic vision of sleeping under the stars with an up-turned canoe protecting you from the elements doesn't appeal.

Most canoes can carry a large metal-clad cooler to hold several days' supply of food. Carefully packed, coolers such as those available from Thermos Division, King-Seely Thermos Co., will keep perishables edible for several days.

Packing cooler
One trick learned by long-time campers is to pack that cooler so the ingredients for each meal are always at the top. Start off at home by listing the specific ingredients for each meal, and group them in meal-size packets of foil or in plastic containers—labeling each packet with masking tape or with self-adhesive labels.

Frozen-foods should go into the cooler still frozen. They can provide cooling qualities the same way does to keep non-frozen foods cool as the thawing process continues.

The cooler is the place to pack your meat, vegetables, milk, juice concentrates and other frozen items.

When you're ready to start paddling, you'll probably find the cooler is your heaviest single piece of equipment. So it should go into the canoe first, packing other items around it to keep your craft properly trimmed or balanced.

Center of gravity
It is important to keep a canoe's center of gravity low and slightly ahead of the beam (that's just to the rear of center for non-nautical types).

When packing your canoe, don't forget to calculate the weight of paddlers and passengers in adjusting the position of various gear for proper trim. No canoe should ever be used without at least six inches of freeboard (height between the edge of a canoe and the water) amidships.

Once your gear is packed, protect it with a waterproof cloth such as the Thermos All-Weather blanket to keep it clean and dry.

When you reach your campsite, the All-Weather blanket can serve several other purposes, such as ground-cloth under your sleeping bag, dining surface to keep food or utensils off the ground, or a lean-to for shelter. You'll find the top of your cooler makes an excellent table for serving.

Camp fire
Next morning, make your fire serve several purposes, too. Besides heating the morning coffee, it also heats water for washing dishes, and can be used to pre-cook lunch. Hot soup can fill one vacuum bottle, with a cool beverage in another.

Sandwiches prepared from meats carried in the cooler can be placed in a plastic bag. This way, lunch is ready when you pause for a midday break.

What kinds of food should you take with you on a canoe trip? Your appetite will tell.

Camping experts offer these hints: Avoid spicy and hard-to-digest foods. Make each meal a well-balanced and nourishing one.

Your cooler can keep meat fresh for several days, along with fruits and vegetables—which also provide extra insulation for your frozen items.

A little pre-planning can make that wilderness trip a greater pleasure.

Common tools cause injury, become damaged with misuse

Having a good set of hand tools around the house is fine as long as you use them properly. If you don't, you can not only damage what you are working on, but yourself as well.

According to the Hand Tools Institute, a trade association of Canadian and American hand tool manufacturers, the four most commonly used and misused tools in every home are the hammer, wrench, pliers and screwdriver.

The common nail hammer, for example, is not designed for use with chisels or other hard objects since it can damage the hammer and, if something snaps off, yourself. The tool is designed for common nails, nothing else.

When using a hammer and most other tools, the HTI recommends that you wear safety goggles.

Hammer blows should strike squarely, the face parallel to the surface being struck. Avoid glancing blows which could send something flying.

Never use a hammer to hit another hammer, or hammer with the side or "cheek" of the tool, or use a hammer that is cracked, chipped or has a loose handle.

Pliers and wrenches are two different tools. They are designed for different purposes and are not interchangeable.

Wrenches are designed to hold and turn nuts, bolts, cap screws, plugs and various threaded parts.

ADJUSTABLE WRENCH

Since the thread of a screw acts as a remorseless wedge, it is possible to strip threads or damage parts by applying too much torque.

Adjustable wrenches are among the most useful tools available for general work.

But, they are not designed to be used in place of fixed opening wrenches—box and socket wrenches. And, the ordinary plastic dipped handles on many wrenches are for comfort only, not for electrical insulation.

STRAIGHT PIPE WRENCH

Adjustable wrenches should be tightly adjusted to the nut and pulled so that the force is on the side of the fixed jaw.

Never use an adjustable wrench to free a "frozen" nut or to give a nut a final tightening. Never pull on a loosely adjusted wrench.

LOCKING PLIER-WRENCH

Never use a hammer on a wrench. Never use an extension on it. If you need more leverage, get a longer wrench.

Pliers of various types are used by practically every mechanic, both amateur and professional.

There are many types, sizes and styles. Even though their versatility makes many of them useful for various jobs, not every plier will do every job.

If you need pliers to cut wire, make sure your pliers are up to it, otherwise you'll damage the cutting edges.

SLIP JOINT PLIERS

Never use pliers as a hammer nor hammer on the handles.

And never use pliers on nuts and bolts. A wrench will do the job better with less risk of damage to the fastener.

FLAT NOSE PLIERS

Next to the hammer, the screwdriver is probably the most used and abused tool in the tool box.

Despite the variety of sizes and shapes they come in, they are all designed for one simple job—putting in and taking out screws.

They are not intended to be used for prying, chiseling, scoring or scraping. And, no matter how heavy the handle might be, it is not intended to be used as a hammer.

But, even when it is used properly it is often misused.

Just as you wouldn't wear shoes that don't fit, you shouldn't use a screwdriver that doesn't fit the job you are doing.

If you do, you stand a good chance of damaging the screwdriver, the head of the screw, the project you're working on and your knuckles.

There are four typical types of screwdrivers:

- Stubby screwdrivers for working in close quarters.

- Screwdrivers with a square shank to which a wrench can be applied to remove stubborn screws.

- Screwdrivers for Phillips screws.

- Cabinet screwdrivers which have a thin shank to reach and drive screws in deep, counter-bored holes.

Suspended ceilings are a snap to install

▼If you're a do-it-yourselfer seeking a simple, inexpensive, suspended ceiling system, Snap Trak is just what you need.

Unlike metal systems, with Snap Trak there is no grid network to set up, no metal braces to cut, no wire hangers to bend, cut or poke yourself with, and no long and complicated strapping or leveling procedures.

And, because Snap Trak is made of solid vinyl, it's lightweight and easy to handle, as well as sturdy.

A support system

The Snap Trak system, made by Westroc Industries, Ltd., is just a support system. Although designed to be used with 2-by-2 and 2-by-4 foot ceiling panels, it can be adapted to handle almost any size panels you might want to use.

Available in black, white or woodgrain finish, Snap Trak is especially useful if you don't want to lower your ceiling too much.

With most systems, you have to lower the ceiling by 3½ inches. You can do the same with Snap Trak, or you can cut down the lost head room to as little as 1½ inches, or any height in between.

Setting up the Snap Trak system is simple.

First attach the "L" shaped wall tracks at the desired height around the perimeter of the room, making sure they are level.

Then mark the ceiling joists to show where you'll attach the track supports every two feet. Stretching a string tautly from an "L" track to the one across the room from it simplifies the job.

Nail in the supports and then simply snap the main tracks into them.

Then, it's just a matter of placing the ceiling tiles on the tracks, adding cross tracks between each one.

Once installed, you will still have easy access to the wires, cables, pipes, electrical circuits or outlets which the panels conceal.

Low-cost installation

The cost of installing a Snap Trak support system in an 8-by-12-foot room is less than $30. This does not, of course, include the price of the ceiling panels.

For more information about the Snap Trak system, check with your local supplier, or write Westroc Industries Ltd., 2650 Lakeshore Highway West, Mississauga, Ont. L5J 1K4.

DO-IT-YOURSELF TO SAVE MONEY

Building suppliers say it's possible to save from 10 to 20 percent of the cost on home remodeling by doing some of the work yourself.

And, the more you do yourself, the more you save.

So, when you are planning to remodel or redecorate, break the project down into all the large, medium and small jobs it consists of, and then decide which ones you'd like to handle yourself. Each one means a savings.

You might also want to take a look at the new products and equipment more and more builders and contractors are using. Many of them are switching to durable and easy-to-install vinyl products.

A visit to a local building supplier or home-care centre might give you some pleasant surprises and the knowledge that you can do a lot more of it yourself than you ever thought possible—and save a lot of money in the process.
